Five Elected State Officials Come From County Government

Two more elected county officials became state officials in this year’s General Election. Pierce County Executive Doug Sutherland and Thurston County Auditor Sam Reed were successful in their bids for Commissioner of Public Lands and Secretary of State, respectively. They join other former county officials Governor Gary Locke (former King County Executive), State Treasurer Mike Murphy (former Thurston County Treasurer), and State Auditor Brian Sonntag (former Pierce County Clerk and Auditor). That now makes five of the nine elected state office-holders who have come from county government backgrounds!

Counties and Forest Service to Begin Implementation of HR 2389

HR 2389, the Forests and Schools Coalition bill passed by Congress earlier this fall requires counties to take action and to work with the Forest Service on implementation. Each county with federal land (USFS or BLM) must begin making decisions on how to establish the required Resource Advisory Committees and which payment option it will choose.

WSAC staff and Timber County leadership have scheduled two meetings with Forest Service staff for a briefing on the options and an opportunity to make preliminary decisions on the structure of Resource Advisory Committees. The meeting for Western Washington counties will take place at the Olympic National Forest Headquarters in Olympia at 2:00 p.m., Wednesday December 20. The meeting for Eastern Washington counties will take place in the Auditorium at the Kittitas County Courthouse at 11:00 a.m., Thursday December 21.

Briefing materials and a meeting notice are being sent to the Board, County Executive and County Council of each affected county. For more information, call Paul Parker at

More Spillover from Dam Resolution: Eastern Washington Invites Seattle City Council to Begin a Dialogue

WSAC has received a copy of a November 27, 2000 letter from Seattle Mayor Paul Schell to all cities and counties in Eastern Washington reiterating that he did not support the Snake River Dam resolution passed by the Seattle City Council and asking that all parties develop “a strategy for meeting our common goals.” Mayor Schell writes that he believes, given “the continuing strong reaction from around the state … the City Council today would agree that the resolution was not the best means for discussing what is a volatile and complex issue. He notes that a broad coalition of Eastern Washington organizations has invited Seattle City Councilmembers to visit with Eastern Washington communities and that several councilmembers have agreed to “begin an open dialogue between Eastern Washington and the City of Seattle.”

The mayor also asked that any specific ideas or suggestions on how the City of Seattle can collaborate and pursue shared interests with Eastern Washington be forwarded to him or to Clifford Traisman, Seattle’s Director of Intergovernmental Relations at 206-684-8260.

Boards & Commission Openings

Forensics Council
A position is available for a county commissioner or councilmember to serve on the state Forensic Investigations Council.

The position, nominated by WSAC and appointed by the governor, will complete the remaining year of a term begun by Skamania County Commissioner Ed McLarney. The appointee will be eligible for re-appointment to a full four-year term.

Interested commissioners and councilmembers should contact WSAC staff Sophia Byrd at 360-753-1886 or sbyrd@wacounties.org. WSAC needs to present the governor with two nominees as soon as possible.

The Forensic Investigations Council, in consultation with the State Patrol, oversees and establishes policies for the bureau of forensic laboratory services and helps prepare the bureau’s budget. The Council may study the death investigation system in Washington and report findings to the Legislature. In conjunction with the University of Washington School of Medicine, the council oversees the state forensic pathology fellowship program.

The Council generally meets monthly on the fourth Friday, in Olympia. Travel expenses are reimbursed.

More information about the Council, its duties and powers is available at RCW 43.103.020 - 090.

Three of the members are required to be members of the Pollution Control Hearings Board and one of the members is required to be the Public Lands Commissioner or a designee from that office. Members of the Board receive travel and subsistence expenses as provided by law. Anyone interested or who would like more information should contact Jackie White of the WSAC staff.

Submit Your Innovative Programs to NACO’s 32nd Annual Achievement Award Program

Applications for the National Association of Counties’ 2001 Achievement Award Program are now available. Begun in 1970, the annual Achievement Award Program is a non-competitive awards program which seeks to recognize innovative county government programs.

In 2000, 124 counties from 29 states were recognized by NACo for developing and implementing responsible responsive and effective county government programs. The winning Achievement Award programs constitute a vast source of information which provides counties with the ability to share their positive and effective programs with other counties nationwide. Last year NACo also awarded 15 Best of Category awards for the most outstanding programs in thirteen categories.

County governments, as well as State Associations of Counties, may submit entries for consideration in any of the following categories: arts and historic preservation; children and youth; civic education and public information; community/economic development; county administration and management; court administration and management; criminal justice and public safety; emergency management and response; employment and training; environmental protection and energy; fiscal management; health; human services; information technology; libraries; parks and recreation; personnel management; employee training and employee benefits; planning; risk management; transportation; and volunteers.

There are several ways to obtain a 2001 application. You may download the application from NACo’s homepage (www.naco.org), call Shawn Hills at 202-661-8834 or fax your request to 202-737-0480. The deadline for submissions is Thursday, February 2, 2001.

News In Brief

Another Hit for WACO and the Risk Pool
WACO and the Washington Counties Risk Pool scored another “hit” in a series of employment seminars recently. 79 participants from 16 counties attended the two one-day offerings of Avoiding Employment Liability in Olympia and Wenatchee.

Oregon Attorney Kathy Peck of Williams Zografs and Peck in Lake Oswego kept the sessions “fast-paced, easy to understand,” and “did an excellent job of presenting a difficult and confusing subject” as she led the trek through the legal jungle of employment law. As the attendees commented, “the speaker was engaging, knowledgeable and energetic” and “effectively brought major issues down to specific real-life examples.”

This is the third year WACO and the Risk Pool have shared resources to bring much-needed employment topics to the counties. The sessions have proved enormously popular and are expected to continue in 2001.

New Web Page - Public Facilities Districts
In response to an increased interest in exploring the formation of public facilities districts, information has been added to the economic development section of the Municipal Research Center’s Web site. Public facilities districts may acquire, construct, and operate sports facilities, entertainment facilities, convention facilities or regional centers and related parking facilities.

Counties have been able to create public facility districts since 1988 (Ch. 36.100 RCW). In 1999 legislation was passed to enable a single city or a group of contiguous cities in counties of less than one million to form a public facilities district to build and operate regional centers (Ch. 35.57 RCW). The county PFD provisions were also amended to provide similar authority. Currently six districts have been formed – three county and three city. They are listed on this page along with the ordinances, resolutions and other documents that have created them. The address of the page is: http://www.mrsc.org/econ/ed-pfd.htm.

I-722 Information on MRSC Web Site
MRSC is continuing to update information I-722 litigation as it becomes available. It may be accessed through WSAC’s Initiative 722 Web page or directly at: http://www.mrsc.org/722/i722.htm.

Reminder to Send 2001 Budgets to MRSC
Municipal Research would like copies of all county budgets for the reference library. The budgets contain valuable program information as well as fiscal data. They are used by staff when responding to and they are made available for loan. Please send to MRSC Library, 1200 4th Avenue, Ste. 1300, Seattle, WA 98101-1159.
State Announces Sex Offender Housing Sites

On November 21, Dennis Braddock, Secretary, Department of Social and Health Services, announced first the finalists among potential sites and then on Dec. 1, the first choice and three alternatives. All of the sites are on state-owned land. Of the 11 potential sites, 8 are in eastern Washington and 3 on the westside. The 11 sites are:

1. The State Patrol fire-training academy in King County;
2. Two sites at the Airway Heights Corrections Center in Spokane County;
3. Three sites near Eastern State Hospital near Medical Lake in Spokane County;
4. The Indian Ridge Youth Camp in Snohomish County;
5. The Washington State Reformatory Farm in Snohomish County;
6. Two sites near the Washington State Penitentiary in Walla Walla; and
7. The Yakima Valley School near the city of Selah in Yakima County.

The primary site announced on Dec. 1 was one of the two sites near the state penitentiary in the City of Walla Walla. The three alternatives are one at Airway Heights, one at Medical Lake, and one at the State Reformatory in Monroe.

Needless to say, there was universal outcry from local elected officials, both city and county. Although WSAC had a county representative, Commissioner Judy Wilson, Thurston, on the site task force, the final selection of possible sites moved faster than anyone would have liked and local officials felt excluded from any real participation in the final decisions. In fact, some of them were not even informed until they read it in their local newspapers.

Spokane County responded by placing a moratorium on new halfway houses disqualifying one of the possible sites in the county that was on the original list of 11.

The hasty decision was a result of DSHS being forced to act under a court order by federal district court judge, William Dwyer. They admit no community is going to welcome a residential facility for sex predators and that they wished they had had more time for a more exhaustive process. Judge Dwyer has mandated the first sex offenders eligible for the residential treatment program would need to be housed no later than March 2001. It is planned the first site would have three offenders and within nine months, a second site would also house three offenders.

Acting Assistant Secretary Tim Brown, Health & Rehabilitative Services, DSHS, indicated 126 offenders at the Special Commitment Center (SCC) on McNeil Island are eligible for residential treatment programs. They are looking at siting a larger facility of up to 30 beds sometime in the future.

At a recent hearing in front of Judge Dwyer, the Judge reiterated that one of his continuing major concerns about the program is the development of this less restrictive alternative after an offender has completed the treatment program at SCC. He currently has a daily fine accumulating against DSHS pending his satisfaction with changes at the Center.

The siting criteria, which were completed prior to selection of potential sites, has a list of factors for a site to meet. They include such items as the home must not be in the “line of sight” of schools, school bus stops, preschool, licensed child care centers, parks, publicly dedicated trails, sports fields, playgrounds, recreational centers, community centers or places of worship. Law enforcement or other designated officials must be able to respond to public safety concerns at the home within five minutes. The residents of the home will be under 24-hour/7-day week supervision and constant electronic monitoring and no more than three offenders may be in any one home.

If there is any positive note about this development, it is that the community will at least know where these offenders are and that they are more closely supervised than any others who are free in the community. It is a sad fact that every community has sex offenders residing among us. Even here at WSAC, several transient offenders have been housed temporarily next door by a local charitable organization.

DSHS Announces Additional 4% Cuts

DSHS has announced the additional 4% cuts they have proposed to the Governor for his consideration and at his request. They are hugely significant in size and impact. It is unknown which ones will be selected by the Governor, either from this list or the earlier 2% cut list which was put in an earlier Courthouse Journal. It is important to remember they are cumulative for a total 6% reduction. The dollar totals for the entire agency are $374 million general fund state and $468 million in total funds.

Additional reductions of particular interest to us, by category, are:

1. Reduction of both secure and non-secure crisis residential centers and family reconciliation services (these are part of the “Becca” package of services);
2. Reduction to county juvenile justice consolidated funds;
3. Reduction of community commitment county-contracted beds for juvenile offenders;
4. Elimination of juvenile parole services;
5. Downsize state mental hospitals by 447 beds or 12 + wards;
6. Reduce county day and employment programs for those with developmental disabilities;
7. Increased case management ratio for Area Agencies on Aging;
8. Elimination of CHORE program for the disabled and elderly;
9. Reduction of nursing home rates and adult day health programs;
10. Elimination of refugee social services;
11. Elimination of WAPA Child Support Enforcement Project;
12. Elimination of vocational factors and addition of time limits on remaining GA-U recipients;
13. Eliminate adult dental for GA-U clients;
14. 2% ratable reduction for providers;
15. Eliminate the medically indigent program; and

New County Finances Study Released

The League of Women Voters of Washington in cooperation with the Institute for Washington's Future released a new report on county finances in October 2000. The purpose of the study and report was to assist members in better understanding the complexities of state/local finance and therefore clarify issues of importance to the county finance system. The report is available on-line at: http://www.lwvw.org/taxes/TaxStudy.doc.

The first section of the report deals with the history and background of Washington taxes. Section 2 covers county responsibilities, powers and revenues. Section 3, entitled "Key Comparisons and Contrasts Among Washington Counties," should be of interest to many WSAC members as it provides a number of charts that compare categories of revenues and expenditures per capita across the state. Section 4 deals with what are termed gaps such as unfunded mandates, infrastructure gaps and equalization. Section 5 deals with issues raised by the study. It identifies "rich" counties and "poor" counties and shows that the top six counties raise more than the remaining thirty three in property taxes. It also shows that the top three counties raise three times more sales tax revenue than the remaining counties combined.

WSAC has already received calls from the news media, and League members will more than likely be using this report when dealing with county finance questions. It would benefit WSAC members to know its contents when you are talking to your local media.
