TVW Celebrates County Government Week

In recognition of County Government week, Denny Heck, Executive Director of TVW and interviewer extraordinaire, will be featuring county government on his Inside Olympia show next week. Inside Olympia is an engaging discussion program typically featuring legislators, reporters, and others with an interesting point of view of state government. Thanks in advance to the County Commissioners and the Councilman who are participating in the discussion about counties and what role they play in our social and political lives.

The April 11, 2002 show will feature King County Councilman Rob McKenna, Franklin County Commissioner Neva Corkrum, Grant County Commissioner Deborah Moore, and Clark County Commissioner Craig Pridemore. The show will air on the TVW network on Thursday, April 11 at 7 p.m. and 11 p.m., Saturday, April 13 at 10 p.m., and Sunday, April 7 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. The show also can be viewed on the TVW website at www.tvw.org. Check the website for additional viewing times.

(If you would like information about National County Government Week, visit the NACo Web site at: www.naco.org. Send information about your county’s activities to Tom Goodman, Director of Public Affairs, at tgoodman@naco.org.)

Need a Ride? Call Rosario

Those attending the Western District Meeting at Rosario may want to leave their cars on the mainland and take advantage of the Rosario Shuttle service. Rosario is offering its shuttle for only $5 per passenger. Call Rosario 72 hours in advance of your arrival at Orcas Landing to arrange for the shuttle. The phone number is (360) 376-2222.
Fire Patrol Meeting with DNR

Jack Westerman, Jefferson County Assessor, Rose Bowman, Lewis County Treasurer, a WACO Associate and staff from the Washington State Department of Natural Resources (DNR) met to discuss implementation of SHB 2104, which was passed by the 2001 Legislature. Members of DNR staff included Judy Wilson, Randy Acker, Judie Cline, and Kerin Elder. The discussion surrounded how DNR interpreted the various aspects of this legislation.

SHB 2104 allows owners with multiple parcels subject to fire patrol in a single county to apply to DNR for a multi-parcel exemption. This is an exemption rather than the current refund program. Previous to the passage of this legislation, timber owners had to pay both the first and second half assessment prior to applying for a refund. Owners did not like DNR keeping their money for almost a year before refunding it back to timber owners in the form of a refund. This bill would allow those owners to apply to DNR for a multi-parcel exemption, and the assessment would be computed on the total acreage. They must do this on an application listing all parcels less than 50 acres owned in a single county. DNR would then compute the assessment for all parcels combined and identify a single parcel to bill. This is to be implemented over the next five years. The first year would be for owners of 10 or more but under 50-acre parcels.

The questions and answers discussed are as follows:

Q: What about multi-county owners?
A: The bill applies only to multi-parcel owners in the same county and to parcels under 50 acres in size.

Q: Is combining the parcels for a multi-parcel exemption available to all taxpayers?
A: Only if the owner applies to have parcels combined for the exemption.

Q: What about ownership that is the same, but with different names, i.e. John Smith, John S. Smith, John & Mary Smith?
A: Those are not the same legal ownership. All John Smith parcels can be combined, all John S. Smith parcels can be combined and all John & Mary Smith parcels can be combined, but the three different legal ownerships cannot be combined. There is a concern regarding Washington being a community property state.

Q: DNR is required, as stated in the bill, to designate which parcel is billed and how the assessment will be handled. Has DNR determined how this will be done?
A: DNR is developing the criteria for this decision. Assessors could have input, or DNR field foresters will review and pick one parcel.

Q: Can DNR certify fire patrol assessments annually to all counties?
A: DNR field foresters are working with Assessors/Treasurers to accomplish this task. We will continue to work with DNR to accomplish this certification annually to all counties.

Q: Who’s responsible for paying the programming or additional staff cost to the counties of implementing the program over the next five years?
A: The $0.50 per parcel given to the counties to collect the assessment should be used for this purpose.

Q: What about the benefit not following the parcel?
A: DNR will be enacting the legislation as written. A law passed by the legislature is deemed to be legal and constitutional until proven otherwise by the courts.

Q: What if a parcel designated as the “billable” parcel is sold—how would the assessment be divided amongst the other parcels?
A: As described in the law, it is the landowner’s responsibility to notify DNR of any changes in ownership.

Q: What if a parcel not designated as the “billable” parcel is sold—how would the assessment be divided back to this parcel?
A: DNR may be losing money if this happens. The landowner is responsible to notify DNR of any landowner changes.

Q: Since the bill (page 4, line 16) requires the assessment to be a lien upon the property protected, how does that work?
A: Until it is challenged, no one knows.

Q: Who is responsible for notifying DNR of change in ownership?
A: The owner is responsible. DNR is developing a letter that would go out each year to all owners who had applied for the multi-parcel combination the previous year.

Q: Are all parcels subject to the multi-parcel exemption provision?
A: No, only parcels less than 50 acres are. Larger parcels (greater than 50 acres) can not be combined with smaller ones to obtain the exemption.

Q: Is DNR considering writing WAC rules to clarify the administration of the legislation?
A: No.

Q: Would DNR consider billing and collecting the fire patrol assessment within their agency?
A: No. They have no billing or collection procedures in place.

Q: How many parcels do you expect to submit the application for the multi-parcel exemption as a result of the legislation?
A: Based on 2001 Refunds:
2002 10 or more 1,369
2003 8 or 9 530
2004 6 or 7 1,440
2005 4 or 5 4,812
2006 2 or 3 26,601

Q: Based on Potential Refunds:
2002 10 or more 1,369
2003 8 or 9 530
2004 6 or 7 1,440
2005 4 or 5 4,812
2006 2 or 3 26,601

There will be further discussions surrounding this program at both the Assessors and Treasurer Affiliate meetings this summer. We will also have a joint Assessor/Treasurer session at our annual WACO Conference this October. One issue will be whether or not counties can wait until December 1 to receive the assessments from DNR.

Remember: this legislation applies only to parcels less than 50 acres! If you would like to read a copy of the bill, you can download it at www.leg.wa.gov, or call WACO and we will fax you a copy. Only the portions of the bill that are underlined represent the changes to existing law.
Governor Signs E-911 Wireless Bill—Now It Is Counties’ Turn to Act

In a small, brief ceremony that belied the long, hard work of dozens of people over several years, Gov. Gary Locke signed HB 2595, which increases the monthly tax on cell phones to help ensure enhanced 911 service for wireless calls.

Beginning January 2003, the bill imposes a statewide 20-cent tax per cell phone per month and authorizes counties to increase their cell phone tax to 50 cents per month. All counties now collect 25 cents per cell phone per month. The increased funding is intended to improve E-911 response to calls from cell phones. Currently call-back numbers and location information—routine with land-line calls—are not available for calls from cell phones.

The state has completed its work on this legislation; now counties can move forward with their component. Any county council or board of commissioners that wants to begin collecting the additional 25 cents per cell phone needs to pass an ordinance adopting the tax increase. (Note that this is a councilmanic action and does not go on the ballot.) To begin collecting the additional amount in January 2003, the county must adopt its ordinance no later than October 2002, in order to provide a required 60-day notice of the tax increase to cell phone companies and their customers.

Some public-education materials that may be of assistance to counties as they begin the ordinance process are available from WSAC staff Sophia Byrd at sbyrd@wacounties.org or (360) 753-1886. County 911 coordinators, emergency management directors, and the state E-911 office are excellent resources for a variety of data and other information.

Numerous county commissioners and sheriffs were especially supportive of HB 2595, traveling several times to Olympia to testify before legislative committees. Many thanks to them and others who supported and actively worked the bill. Unfortunately, few could attend the April 3 bill signing. Also unable to attend were the bill’s prime sponsor, Rep. Jeff Morris of Skagit County, and prime sponsor of a Senate companion bill, Sen. Karen Fra-} ser of Thurston County. Longtime E-911 supporter Sen. Sid Snyder of Pacific County did attend the bill signing and was given the governor’s pen used to sign the bill.

New Sales Tax Authority for Emergency Communications

The governor has signed HB 1477, which authorizes an additional one-tenth of one percent local-option sales tax to help pay for a variety of projects and activities associated with emergency communications.

While the bill often has been described as a funding tool for construction of facilities and acquisition of equipment, it is much more. Section 1 of the bill provides that moneys received from the additional sales tax may be used for “financing, design, acquisition, construction, equipping, operating, maintaining, remodeling, repairing, re-equipping, and improvement of emergency communication systems and facilities.” This very broad purpose could include such things as a seismic retrofit of the dispatch center, purchase of new police radios, equipment upgrades, and salary assistance for 911 call takers.

Unlike the E-911 wireless excise tax (see article above), voters must approve this sales tax increase. Several counties have indicated they will pursue the sales tax because they believe the purpose is popular with voters, and because it will move some critical and costly services out of the county general fund.

Drug Sentencing Committees Need County Representation

HB 2338, which reduces prison sentences for certain drug offenses and directs the prison savings to drug treatment, establishes several committees to help implement the landmark legislation. The bill specifies WSAC representation on three committees that will review drug-sentencing provisions and distribute up to $8.2 million annually to counties for offender treatment programs, including drug court.

Because of the integrated and somewhat overlapping nature of the committees, a single individual serving on all the committees might best represent WSAC. Any WSAC member seeking the position should submit a letter of interest to the WSAC Board of Directors by May 15. The Board will appoint a representative at its June meeting. Committee members are not paid, but are eligible for reimbursement of travel expenses.

Following is an overview of the committees’ functions. For more detail, see the bill at www.leg.wa.gov.

- The Joint Select Committee on the Drug Offense Sentencing Grid will review and make recommendations by June 1, 2003, regarding a new Drug Offense Sentencing Grid. Among other things, the committee shall establish a methodology for determining fiscal consequences to the state and local governments, examine racial disproportionality issues, recommend a statewide method of evaluating drug court success, review and revise criteria for funding treatment programs, and review and recommend changes in distribution of funds for offender treatment. The group will have strong staff support from the Sentencing Guidelines Commission, the Caseload Forecast Council, and the Legislature.

- Seventy-five percent of the money saved from reduced prison sentences will be appropriated to the state Division of Alcohol and Substance Abuse (DASA), to be distributed to counties. DASA, serving as the fiscal agency for distribution of the county treatment funds, is establishing a committee to develop the county distribution formula. This formula will distribute 70 percent of the local treatment funds. More detail on this function likely will be available in mid-April, according to DASA staff.

- The remaining 30 percent of local treatment funds are to be distributed to counties as grants. The grant awards will be determined by a panel of stakeholders that review plans submitted by counties or groups of counties. DASA also will provide more information on this process in a few weeks.

Free Satellite Conference Addresses Mental Illness in Jails

As county officials in this state know, jails have experienced a dramatic rise in the number of inmates exhibiting symptoms of serious mental illness. Many jails are ill-equipped to manage this population and have limited resources for providing services.

To help address these issues, the National Institute of Corrections (NIC) has scheduled a live interactive satellite/internet video conference for April 17, 2002. Please register by April 15 at the NIC’s web site at www.nicic.org. Participating sites that register by April 15 will be able to download satellite coordinates and internet access information as well as an agenda, handouts, and recommended reading materials. Participants also may call in questions via a toll-free telephone number displayed on the screen during the conference.

The event is intended to help participants better understand the issues, identify essential components for managing mentally ill inmates, understand creative approaches to meeting inmates’ mental health needs, and identify potential resources to help jails better serve mentally ill inmates.

The video conference is available at no charge to any agency or facility nationwide with access to the internet or satellite dish or downlink (C-band or KU-band transponder).

Correctional agencies may be able to obtain a free satellite dish by contacting Anne Charles at (800) 531-4288.

Feds Announce “Serious, Violent Offender Reentry Initiative”

Several federal agencies, under the leadership of the Department of Justice (DOJ) Office of Justice Programs, are announcing applications for the “Serious, Violent Offender Reentry Initiative.”

This grant program is designed to address the issues related to violent offenders being released from correctional facilities into communities. The program aims to reduce recidivism by these returning offenders and thus enhance community safety.

Eligible applicants are states, local jurisdictions, or tribes that represent a partnership between institutional and community corrections agencies.

Although some new grants will be awarded, the focus of the initiative is not “new money.” Rather, the federal partners are identifying funds from their respective agencies that are already available and suitable for the purposes of the initiative. The goal is to fund at least one sustainable program in each state. Each site would receive approximately $500,000 to $2 million.

Application information is available by calling the DOJ at (800) 421-6770 or online at www.ojp.usdoj.gov/reentry/solicitation/solicitation.html. The application deadline is May 15.

OJJDP Title II Formula Grant

The Governor’s Juvenile Justice Advisory Committee (GJJAC) has announced the release of a new Request for Proposals (RFP). Proposals for the grants program for runaways and youth in conflict are due May 6, 2002. The RFP can be found on the GJJAC website at www.wa.gov/juvenilejustice; call (360) 407-0151 for a hard copy.
Transportation and Public Works

The Governor Takes Action on the Transportation Revenue Packages

The governor took action on three bills that may provide both a regional and statewide transportation package to the voters. The $7.7 billion dollar statewide proposal will be offered to the voters this November. The statewide proposal is package into two bills, ESHB 2969, which outlines the financing and is a referendum to the people, and ESSB 6347, which outlines how the new funding will be spent. The regional transportation revenue package, ESSB 6140, authorizes King, Pierce, and Snohomish counties to establish a regional transportation proposal to take to the voters. The voters in all three counties have the potential to raise as much as $5.1 billion during the next 10 years. Ninety percent of the funds raised may be used for “highways of statewide significance” (HSS), and 10 percent may be used for principal arterials that can demonstrate that they provide the same congestion relief as an HSS. ESSB 6140 was passed with a “null and void” clause if no new statewide revenue was approved by January 1, 2003, but the governor vetoed that section of the bill. Please see the attached summaries for more detail.

Good Things

Walla Walla Named One of the Best Places to Live

In the March 2002 issue of Sunset Magazine, Walla Walla, Washington was determined to be one of the best places in the West to live, based on criteria that included good architecture, vibrant downtowns, handsome trees—and, most of all, a caring community.

In particular, Walla Walla was named “Best Main Street." The article, written by Lawrence Cheek, looks at Walla Walla in the 1970s when the downtown area experienced a dramatic slump in the economy. Three of four department stores fled, and a major landmark—the Marcus Whitman, a 12-story luxury hotel built in 1927—went condo. However, Walla Walla retained critical assets, including Whitman College, a wine industry that grew from a few vines in 1977 to 34 wineries today, and the most important component—a nucleus of people who cared. Today downtown Walla Walla holds renovated Victorian commercial buildings. It has retained the Bon Marché department store (partly housed in the 1917 Liberty Theater) and has attracted serious wineries and tasting bars. Finally, last spring, after a $35 million renovation, the Marcus Whitman reopened to the public.

Mr. Cheek states in the close of his article, “Real character is impossible to fake. It grows from within. Walla Walla, which Theodore Roosevelt might well praise today, proves it.” Congratulations Walla Walla!
The Governor Signs GMA Timelines bill into Law

The Growth Management Timeline bill (SSB 5841) will become law June 13, 2002. The governor signed the bill in total this week after making a few statements about how this bill will assist local governments.

SSB 5841 delays mandatory September 2002 GMA updates (including critical area ordinances) in all cities and counties. The bill also specifies that subsequent updates shall occur every seven years rather than the current requirement for every five years. The update extensions in the bill are as follows:

- December 2004 for King, Pierce, Snohomish, Kitsap, Clark, Thurston, Jefferson, Clallam, and Whatcom Counties
- December 2006 for Benton, Chelan, Douglas, Grant, Kittitas, Spokane, and Yakima Counties.

In addition, the bill:

- Allows any county/city required to update by December 2004 to skip the first required update if one was finalized after January 1, 2001, but before the December 2004 required date.
- Does not add any new planning requirements or definitions/references to best available science.
- Makes clear that cities and counties must hold a public hearing to decide what updates, if any, are appropriate for local plans and regulations.
- Restates current law provisions describing state funds that cannot be accessed if a city or county is out of compliance with GMA, including the review and update requirement.

U.S. Supreme Court Leaves Skamania County in Driver’s Seat

The U.S. Supreme Court this week denied the Columbia River Gorge Commission’s request to review a Washington State Court of Appeals decision upholding a Skamania County land use policy. The Gorge Commission sought review because it believed the Court of Appeals interpreted the National Scenic Area Compact and its Management Plan in a way that could lead to different land use rules being applied to Washington and Oregon portions of the Scenic Area.

The case arose when Chris Woodall, an adjacent property owner, appealed a Skamania County decision allowing expansion of a trailer park, claiming the facility was a “discontinued” use. The Gorge Commission determined Skamania County applied Washington state law instead of the long-standing Scenic Area interpretation of the discontinued standard. The Court of Appeals’ decision remanded the case back to the Gorge Commission to decide whether the trailer park was discontinued under Washington law.

The state of Oregon and the Delaware River Port Authority filed briefs in support of the Gorge Commission’s petition to the Supreme Court. Two of the initial drafters of the Scenic Area legislation, former U.S. Senators Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon and Daniel J. Evans of Washington, also filed briefs supporting the Gorge Commission.

DNR Debates Tree Cutting

The Washington State Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is currently working out how many trees to cut on state trust land over the next decade, and they want your input. Last year the state cut about 550 million board feet of timber, netting $281 million for schools and counties. Especially in rural areas, both rely heavily on state timber money.

DNR will decide the harvest level for 1.2 million acres in Western Washington in July 2003, and will study Eastern Washington after that.

The public comment period on sustainable harvest ends April 10, although comments are welcome after that at any of the Board of Natural Resources’ monthly meetings. To comment, see the DNR website: http://www.wa.gov/dnr or e-mail John.Baarsppulwadnr.gov. Written comments can be sent to P.O. Box 47016, Olympia, WA 98504-7016.

Timber Counties—Upcoming Meetings on PL 106-393 and PILT

WSAC is planning four regional meetings to cover Public Law 106-393 (PL 106-393), also known as the “Secure Rural Schools and Community Self-Determination Act of 2000.” The primary purpose of the meetings will be to address concerns regarding the implementation of the law, Title II and III allocation choices, and the effect thereof on Payments in Lieu of Taxes (PILT). All county personnel directly involved with the implementation of this law are encouraged to attend one of the meetings. The Western regional meetings are scheduled for May 9 (Everett) and 10 (Olympia); the Eastern meetings are currently set for May 29 (Ellensburg) and 30 (Spokane). Meeting locations and times to be announced in the Courthouse Journal later this month.

Big Demand for Water Quality Funding

The Department of Ecology reports that the most recent application process for water quality funding resulted in 121 loan and grant applications. A total of $14.5 million in grants was requested with only $12.5 million in funding available. There was $131 million in loan funds requested with only $127 million in funding available.

The decision process for the funding cycle will make the draft award list available, with the start of a 30-day public review, on June 18, 2002. The final list will be available August 20, 2002.

Ecology expects a serious funding shortfall in the 2003-05 biennium, in the range of $22M-$25M, for water quality programs. Grants may not be available.

Ecology’s Water Quality Financial Assistance Council is discussing what Best Management Practice (BMP) work is grant/loan eligible. According to Donald Gatchalian, a Yakima County representative on the Council, the following is a sampling of topics under discussion:

Traditional Activity Project BMPs (grant eligible):
- Grassed Waterways
- Irrigation Water Management
- Permanent Vegetative Cover
- Public Education
- Riparian Fencing
- Septic System Surveys
- Storm Drain Stenciling
- Grass Lined Swales
- Traditional Facility Project BMPs (loan eligible):
  - Animal Waste Storage
  - Animal Waste Distribution Systems
  - Animal Waste Transfer
  - Conventional Wastewater Treatment
  - Chemigation Systems
  - Irrigation Enclosed Conduit
  - Irrigation Ditch Lining
  - Septic System Repair/Replacement
  - Streambank Stabilization (Engineered)

Ineligible Projects or Practices (not loan/grant eligible). Some of these projects are eligible for funding from other fund source like the Salmon Recovery Fund (SRF), etc.:

- Subsoiling
- Increased Surface Residue
- Reservoir Tillage Operations
- Chemical Fallow Operations
- Cross Fencing to Restrict Range Animal Movement
- Land Acquisition/leases/easements

The Water Quality Financial Assistance Council meets every two months. The next meeting is Tuesday, June 4, 2002 from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Environmental Summit on the West Features National and State Leaders
The Western Governors’ Association and the White House Council on Environmental Quality will co-sponsor the Second Environmental Summit on the West in Salt Lake City, Utah, on April 24–26, 2002, to advance successful approaches for addressing tough environmental and natural resource issues.

Governors will be joined by key administration officials and other dignitaries, including Secretary of Interior Gale Norton; Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christie Whitman; White House Council on Environmental Quality Chairman James L. Connaughton; and Fred Krupp, Executive Director, Environmental Defense.

Participants will not only learn about successful on-the-ground strategies being employed across the West and nation, but will also participate in breakout sessions with government leaders to develop recommendations on key issues. Topics include:
- Species conservation while assisting landowners in maintaining working landscapes
- Meeting growing and competing demands for water
- Expanding the use of renewable energy resources
- Cooperative siting of interstate energy infrastructure
- Reducing wild land fire risks to communities while restoring forest health
- Industrial environmental innovation: value for the community, globe and bottom line
- Assessing Western perspectives on multi-pollutant proposals for utilities and carbon dioxide strategies
- Successful partnerships and new tools to conserve open lands

The first Environmental Summit on the West was held in Phoenix in December 1998. With the assistance of hundreds of stakeholders who participated in the interactive sessions, the governors adopted the eight principles of Enlibra for making progress on complex environmental and natural resource management problems. Since then, the principles have been adopted as a guiding philosophy and incorporated into the work of small community groups; large corporations; and state, tribal, regional, and federal organizations and institutions.

"The Bush Administration is pleased to join the Western Governors’ Association in sponsoring this Second Environmental Summit on the West," said White House CEQ Chairman James L. Connaughton.

Upcoming Events and Training

(Continued from page 9) "The President is committed to working in partnership with tribal, state and local governments, as well as private citizens, organizations and businesses to foster stewardship and advance our common environmental goals. Gatherings such as this are an important opportunity to share ideas and experiences that may guide future environmental conservation policies."

The Environmental Summit on the West will be held at the Little America Hotel. Additional information on the meeting is available on the WGA Web site at www.westgov.org/wga/initiatives/enlibra/summit_II.

Courthouse Ramblings

The Grant County Sheriff’s Office is starting a Citizen Academy for residents who want to learn how the agency operates and, perhaps, lend a hand. The three-hour classes will be held every Wednesday evening for eight weeks beginning June 5.

Health Care Hard to Find for Some

By CAROL SMITH

SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER

Low-income and elderly patients, unable to find local doctors willing to treat them, are increasingly turning to already crowded emergency rooms in Seattle and across the state.

Large medical practices in King, Snohomish and Pierce counties have closed their doors to new Medicare and Medicaid patients and more are considering it, according to the Washington State Medical Association.

Declining reimbursement rates mean more doctors are losing money on Medicare patients, making the already hard-to-absorb Medicaid patients even harder to absorb and driving more of the poor and elderly to the ER.

"There are more people turning 65 years old every minute. And if you've got fewer doctors willing to serve those folks, it will be terrible," said Jean Mathiesen, who handles senior rights issues for the non-profit Senior Services of Seattle/King County.

"Emergency department volumes have skyrocketed," said Tom Curry, president of the state medical association. Aging baby boomers and a surge of unemployed workers who've lost their health insurance are also helping to drive up ER visits. But doctors said at least some of the growth is from patients who just can't find doctors.

"Doctors are caught in this vise between their professional ethics and business ethics," Curry said. "They want to treat patients, but they can't afford to."

Although no one can say yet how much of the increased pressure on ERs is coming from patients without doctors, it's clear that the number of low-income and elderly people falling in that category is on the rise.

A federal 5.4 percent across-the-board cut in Medicare payments took effect in January and forced many doctors to reconsider their Medicare and Medicaid practice loads, said Don Fisher, president of the American Medical Group Association, which represents 70,000 physicians in 380 medical groups around the country.

"We are already seeing groups going out of business and physicians leaving practices," he said. "Patients are left scrambling. It's not good for patient care to have them shunted from place to place."

Anecdotal evidence suggests ER doctors are treating many more patients who don't have their own physicians, said Dr. Kathleen Jobe of the University of Washington Medical Center.

"We already have a problem with ERs having to go on divert for ambulances (send incoming patients to other hospitals)," said Jobe, state chapter president of the American College of Emergency Physicians. "Any increase in the number of patients just makes things worse."

Earlier this month, Valley Medical Center in Renton set a record by seeing 269 ER patients in one day. That's more than double the usual load.

"We're seeing a very large increase in the number of people coming into the ER," said Phil Haas, director of admissions. Since the Medicare cuts took effect, the ER has seen visits jump 16 percent to 18 percent.

Statewide, emergency room use is up 28 percent on a per capita basis over the past two years. Some of that comes from patients who have nowhere else to turn, Haas said. "The safety net is getting to have wider gaps."

Providence Medical Center-Everett also has an overflowing ER -- in part because at least two large medical practice groups in Snohomish County have closed or restricted the number of new Medicare and Medicaid patients they will see.

Seattle's Harborview Medical Center, which already sees a large percentage of Medicaid patients, hasn't seen a significant increase in emergency admissions, said spokeswoman Susan Gregg Hanson.

A recent survey by the American College of Emergency Physicians found that at least three-quarters of large hospitals around the state now face overcrowding two to three times a week for seven hours at a time. And 82 percent of doctors directing those large emergency rooms said they expect the problem to get worse.

Children are coming in sicker and having to wait longer than they did five years ago, when many more had access to primary-care doctors in the community, said Dr. Richard Molteni, medical director at Children's Hospital.

At Children's, the number of children on Medicaid using the emergency room as a doctor's office has increased about 35 percent in the last two years, Molteni said.

Today, the hospital admits about 15 percent of the kids that come to the ER sick -- about double the percentage of admissions compared with five years ago. Children are sometimes kept up to eight hours in waiting rooms before they're seen or allowed to go home, he said.

Even more troubling are the patients who leave without being seen because the waits are so long.

"Those are the ones we worry about," Molteni said.

Practices that have closed their doors to the poor and elderly insist they did so in order to survive financially. Family Care Network in Bellingham, which has 11 locations and provides about half the primary care for its area, is one of them.

"In every case, when we got above a certain percentage (about 25 percent) of Medicare and Medicaid patients, it was impossible to operate the office in a way that it would pay for itself," said Dr. David Lynch, who directs clinic operations for the 45-doctor group. "And that's before we paid our doctors anything. We realized we would go out of business if we didn't do something." In 2000, Family Care Network lost an average of $4 every time one of its physidoctors saw a Medicare patient. And that was before this year's further cuts.

Edmonds Family Medicine loses roughly $10 per visit for each Medicare patient, according to administrator Marcy Shimada. The clinic no longer sees Medicare patients from the outside, although it will continue to see patients who have been at the practice for some time and are just turning Medicare-eligible age, she said.

In King County, 85 out of 96 doctors practicing through Puget Sound Family Physicians have closed their practices to new Medicare patients, said Dr. Paul Buehrens, a family doctor with the Lakeshore Clinic in Kirkland, which is part of the Puget Sound network.

And he hears the same thing from his peers around the state, although some won't say publicly that they are closed. "The number of doctors who won't take Medicare is far bigger than they're admitting," he said.

In Snohomish County, only about 20 percent of the doctors at the Everett Clinic, the largest provider in the county, will see any new patients at all, including those on Medicare and Medicaid, said Rick Cooper, chief executive of the 200-doctor clinic. New Medicare patients can still be seen through the walk-in clinic system, but then the problem is finding follow-up care, he said.

"We've not yet closed completely to new Medicare," he said. "But the access is extremely restricted. It's a very real problem."

In the past, physicians were able to make up for money they lost seeing poor patients or those without insurance by shifting costs to other patients with private coverage, Lynch said. "But everybody wants to lower their costs," he said. "We've lost the ability to cost-shift."

Washington already has relatively low reimbursement rates compared with some other states. On average, Medicare spends about $10,000 per year for each Medicare patient in Florida, compared with about $3,800 a year here.

The trend is already making it hard to recruit doctors, and many fear a "white coat flight" could further compromise access to care in Washington.

"Our group lost five doctors last year, and it's people in their prime who are leaving," said Lynch. "It's been very difficult to recruit."

Solving the crisis won't be easy. Doctors and state officials say it will require some combination of raising reimbursement rates and reducing the number of patients on government programs. Although Congress will have to take action, the state is also looking into ways to better manage the chronically ill so they don't wind up in emergency rooms.

In an effort to try to keep more doctors from leaving, the Washington Legislature kept a 5 percent increase in Medicaid reimbursement in the budget, although it is only half the amount recommended by Gov. Gary Locke. Medicare reimbursement rates are set by the federal government.

"This is being treated as a much more serious issue than a year ago," said Jim Stevenson, spokesman for the state Department of Social and Health Services. Practices have always tended to limit their Medicaid patients, because Medicaid only partially reimburses doctors for the cost of seeing a patient.

Inmate Claims Neglect At Jail

Thursday, April 4, 2002

By WARREN CORNWALL

HERALD WRITER

A pregnant Snohomish County inmate couldn't get the care she needed in the jail, leaving her seriously dehydrated and losing weight, a jail doctor says.

Dr. Ann Kammeyer, a Marysville physician who contracted with the county to care for inmates, wrote a letter urging a judge to release the woman from jail because Kammeyer couldn't get needed dietary care for her.

"Under such conditions, I cannot take responsibility for her well-being or for that of her baby," Kammeyer wrote.

The doctor's plea prompted Superior Court Judge Richard Thorpe to let the 26-year-old woman out of jail March 25, and to write a scathing letter to jail director Andrea Bynum and top county elected officials.

"I was shocked and outraged," Thorpe wrote in the March 27 letter. "If the situation described is true, and I have no reason to suspect that it is not, I trust you will endeavor to prevent this sort of thing from ever happening again."

Thorpe also warned the treatment represented an "invitation to litigation."

A senior jail administrator chalked up the problem largely to miscommunication that has been addressed and said the matter has been overblown.

"I think we've looked into the issues and dealt with the issues," said Randy Fis-sen, who oversees the jail's food services.

The former inmate, however, remained upset by what she considered mistreatment at the jail.

"I don't think it's very right," said the woman, who asked that her name not be made public.

She spent 11 days in jail in late March for failing to pay fines on a 1997 car theft conviction and for driving with a suspended license, according to court records.

The woman was 15 weeks pregnant at the time and suffered from vomiting associated with the pregnancy, she said. In the jail, the woman said she often didn't get the extra food portions that pregnant inmates are supposed to get, even after calling the problem to the attention of jail officers.

"I'd ask them if I was going to get my pregnancy tray, and that's when the guards would say, 'Well, what do you need a special tray for? There's nothing that says you're supposed to get one.' "

During her jail stay she lost 7 or 8 pounds, she said.

Those problems are echoed in Kammeyer's letter.

The doctor wrote that the pregnant inmate had lost "an unacceptable amount of weight" and wasn't getting the food she needed.

"The head of food services has not only refused to provide the standard pregnancy-enhanced diet, but also treated the nursing staff to a tirade after I requested Gatorade and a cracker for her," Kammeyer wrote.

Kammeyer couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday.

The inmate went for several days without the special diet for pregnant women, and a request for the Gatorade wasn't met, Finsen said.

But it wasn't because officials refused to do anything, he said. The food service provider was mistakenly not alerted that the woman was pregnant until five days after she was booked into the jail, he said.

Then, when the doctor faxed an order for the Gatorade, it wasn't provided because it isn't normally supplied by the food service company that has the contract for the jail, Finsen said. In the future, the company will meet those requests, he said.

The food service company, Canteen Services Corp., did not return a call for comment.

Finsen also said there was no evidence of a tirade by the food services director, Bruce Munn.

"There's a lot more to it than just the letter that was sent, and she did not have all the facts," he said of Kammeyer. Munn could not be reached for comment.

Kammeyer's last day of work at the jail was March 27, the day Thorpe wrote his letter about the incident. But Finsen said her departure was related to contract negotiations, not the letter.

The former inmate said Kammeyer eventually bought her a can of powdered Gatorade with the doctor's own money. That Gatorade, however, was taken by jail officers who said she needed to ask them each time she wanted some. The woman said when she later asked, she wasn't given any of the drink.

In addition to the food problems, the former inmate said she was forced to sleep on a thin mat on the floor for a week, and that jail officers refused her request for a second pad to make her sleeping more comfortable.

Finsen said he had no information about her claims.

Because of overcrowding, the jail has resorted to having inmates sleep on the mats. Finsen said jail policy is to accommodate people when there is a medical need for something, such as an additional mat.

"We really take it seriously, making sure we're taking care of the inmate population," he said.
