Washington Counties Scholarship Winners

As mentioned in last week’s edition of the Courthouse Journal, the five winners of the Washington Counties Scholarships have been named and will each be awarded $1,500 to the school of their choice. Two hundred and fifteen applications were received from across the state; each was reviewed by a team, and all of the finalists were rated by a committee of three independent panelists. The five winners include three from Chelan County, one from Island County, and one is a two-time winner from Stevens County. All of the applicants were outstanding, and the choices were difficult to make, but one thing for certain is that the county officials and employees whose children applied should be absolutely proud of such well-rounded and accomplished young adults.

The scholarship winners are:

1. Mitzi Walter, the daughter of Chelan County Commissioner Ron Walter, and wife, Deborah. Mitzi is a graduate of Wenatchee High School and is attending college at Arizona State University (ASU). She was very active in varsity track during high school, until a serious back injury and subsequent surgeries put her on the sidelines. She credits that experience for her perseverance through adversity, her courage, and her character. Mitzi is studying both nursing and Spanish at ASU and would love to someday be part of mission work in Latin America. This summer she will be in the summer intern program with Young Life, of which she has been a member for several years.

2. Griffin Thornock, the daughter of Kathy Thornock, Chelan-Douglas County Health District, and husband, Dave, is a graduate of Wenatchee High School and is just finishing her sophomore at the University of Washington. Griffin is a math and science whiz with a long list of honors and awards. Physics is her passion, and she is majoring in Civil Engineering; upon graduation she wants to “concentrate on solving traffic and congestion problems at airports, on highways, or in downtown areas.” Washington State needs her!

3. Kelsey Schmidt, the daughter of Alan Schmidt, Chelan County Public Works, and wife, Judy, will be graduating from Entiat High School. She is involved in athletics, music and art, is part of the Running Start program and achieved the title of Queen Entiat 2001–02. Long thinking about a career involving helping children, Kelsey will enter the Psychology Department at Western Washington University this fall. Her goal is to become a child psychologist.

4. Chelsea Combest-Friedman, the daughter of Cheryl Combest, Snohomish County Health District, and husband, Bob Friedman, will be graduating from St. Michels University School, in Victoria, B.C., and heading on to college in the fall. Chelsea is described as “socially and environmentally conscious” and “globally aware” most likely because of her varied background. She has lived in Canada, the United States, West Africa, and Madagascar. Chelsea is interested in pursuing a degree in Environmental Science/International Relations.

5. Brenda Buckner, the daughter of Pauline Coleman, Stevens County Commissioners’ office, won a Washington Counties Scholarship for the second year in a row. Brenda, a graduate of Colville High School will be a senior at the University of Washington next fall in the School of Architecture. She is currently vying for a space on a trip to travel to Mexico with a group of her peers and instructors during the winter of 2003, where they will be working with various architects and contractors on an extensive design-build project. With her tenacity, we are sure she will be making the trip!

The two runners-up for the scholarships were Jared Rylander Barnhill, whose mother Mary Ann works in the Kitsap County Auditor’s office, and Brett Christensen, whose mother Mary is employed by King County Transportation and Road Services. Barnhill holds two positions at the Battle Point Astronomical Association, takes astronomy photos, and he and his father have just finished completing construction of an observatory at their home. He is headed for the field of astrophysics. Christensen says he is “quite obsessed with the science that lies on the brink between reality and fantasy.” He is a high school senior and is in the Running Start program at Highline Community College. Christensen’s goal is to become a Ph.D in Physics and to become an inventor.

More Washington Counties’ Scholars

Good job! The following students were considered in the final round of review for Washington Counties’ Scholarships. Counties take note—these students would be excellent summer employees if jobs are available in your jurisdiction. There were 215 applications received for the awards, but unfortunately, only five awards were available.

Tricia Bays, daughter of Gayle Zeller, Thurston County Development Services
Wesley Cameron Brenner, son of Barbara Brenner, Whatcom County Council
Anthony Brown, son of Robyn Brown, Thurston County Health Department
Trisha Bury, daughter of Kay Bury, Clallam County Auditor’s Office
Roger Caliman, son of Jan Caliman, Wahkiakum County Human Services
Angela Michelle Callas, daughter of Thomas Callas, Lewis County Sheriff’s Office
Kerri Lynn Cook, daughter of Cheri Cook-Blodgett, Skagit Co. Administrative Services
Samantha Ferguson, daughter of Sharon Ferguson, Clark County Clerk’s Office
Chase Gallagher, son of Cathy and Ross Gallagher, Mason County Clerk’s Office
Jennifer Gill, daughter of Charles Gill, Yakima County Sheriff’s Office
Cassandra Giudice, daughter of Sherry and John Giudice, Whitman County Sheriff’s Office
Darcey Goelz, daughter of Mary Goelz, Pacific Co. Health Dept., and Douglas Goelz, Pacific Co. District Court Judge
David Clayton Grochowski, son of Stan Grochowski, Pierce Co. Geographical Information Services
Amanda Hanks, daughter of Cindi Buchanan, Cowlitz County Juvenile Department
Andrea Rachel Hennings, daughter of Debora Hyde, Pierce County Executive’s Office

Letter from WSAC President LeRoy Allison

Over the last two weeks, I have written to county commissioners, council members and county executives asking that you come to Bellevue from June 18–21 to participate in the WSAC Annual Convention. By joining together with other levels of government, and working smarter, we will accomplish more.

We have assembled several sessions at the convention that demonstrate opportunities for working together, and some successes that already are underway. On Friday morning, June 21, three top federal, state, and local emergency management officials will address new initiatives such as anti-terrorism assistance and longstanding challenges, including floodplain mapping, that confront governments engaged in emergency preparedness and response. The panelists include FEMA Region X Director John Pennington, state Emergency Management Director Glen Woodbury, and King County Emergency Management Director Eric Holdeman.

Also on Friday morning, we are hosting a discussion of the recent landmark decision of the Washington Supreme Court holding that the petition method of annexation is unconstitutional. The decision was based on the Article 1, Section 12 of the Washington State Constitution that protects “impermissible privilege to owners of highly valued land”. Land use consultant Mike McCormick will engage county, city, and fire district participants in their responses to this monumental decision.

In addition, new efforts at collaborative problem solving will be shared in a Thursday plenary session featuring Bob Lohn, the Regional Director for the National Marine Fisheries Service. That Thursday morning, Seattle Mayor Greg Nickels—a former WSAC member as a King County Councilman—will share his observations on governmental cooperation from the county and city viewpoint.

Please join us in Bellevue at the WSAC Annual Convention on June 18–21 to better move forward in your own county with our city, state and federal partners.

White to Leave WSAC; Merriman to Join

Jackie White, WSAC Transportation and Land Use Policy Director, announced this week that she will be leaving WSAC after nearly two years on the staff. White has accepted a position with the Association of Washington Cities (AWC) and will continue to lobby for transportation issues. The decision was unexpected, although AWC had a vacant position when their previous lobbyist accepted a job with the Department of Transportation earlier this spring.

Moving quickly to fill this key position, Executive Director Bill Vogler has hired Scott Merriman to replace White. For the past two years, Merriman has been the lobbyist for the Office of Community Development, and for two years prior to that he did a similar job for the Department of Natural Resources. Merriman has also worked for the former state Energy Office and was a lobbyist for the Washington Environmental Council. Merriman will begin employment on July 1st and will cover the transportation and land use policy areas. He plans on visiting counties this summer to acquaint himself with county engineers, planning directors, and the members.

We are pleased to have Scott join the staff.

Journal Publication Moves to Thursday...

Beginning today, the Courthouse Journal will be published on Thursday, rather than Friday. During the 2003 legislative session, we will go back to our Friday publication date. The deadline to submit materials for the Journal will be Wednesday at 12 noon.

Legislative Steering Committee Co-Chairs Appointed

WSAC President LeRoy Allison has appointed Kitsap County Commissioner Chris Endresen and Benton County Commissioner Leo Bowman the co-chairs for the 2002–03 WSAC Legislative Steering Committee. Commissioner Endresen returns as a co-chair after having served in that position for the past year. The first meeting of the Legislative Steering Committee will take place on June 21 immediately following the WSAC Summer Convention in Bellevue.

Other members of the Legislative Steering Committee have yet to be named. If you are interested in serving, please contact WSAC President LeRoy Allison, WSAC Vice-President Harold Moss, or WSAC Executive Director Bill Vogler by May 28. The full membership will be announced the first week of June.

States’ Approach to Sales Tax Definitions May Increase Exemptions

States are rushing to complete work on a uniform national system of sales tax administration by July. Recent meetings have focused on defining broad categories of items that can be taxed or exempted from sales and use tax. Many of these definitions will force the Legislature to choose between broadening sales tax exemptions and ending some existing exemptions. For instance, some tax-exempt items for livestock have been lumped together with items for pets.

The state currently tends to tax items for pets, but exempts items for livestock. The national model would force the state to either tax or exempt all of the items within a category. The state has seldom eliminated tax exemptions, so many of these groupings are likely to result in a further erosion of state and local sales tax revenue.

Many industries, including the software industry, are trying to include their products in categories that currently enjoy exemptions in most large states. By using this tactic, they can avoid having to re-enact or enact tax exemptions. This would limit states’ options in reforming their tax systems to lower rates and reduce exemptions. It also would put many growth industries permanently beyond the reach of local taxation.

The State Department of Revenue doesn’t have estimates yet of the revenue consequences of the choices the Legislature will face. In the past, the department has been unable to provide estimates at the jurisdiction level.

The purpose of the states’ effort is to convince Congress to permit state and local governments to collect sales tax on catalogue and internet sales.

Rulemaking Process Under Way for State E-911 WAC

The state E-911 office has filed proposed amendments to the Washington Administrative Code (WAC) relating to how state E-911 funding may be provided to counties. The rulemaking process includes a public hearing from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday, May 29, at the SeaTac Radisson Hotel.

The proposed rule amendments are intended to implement SSB 5335 (RCW 38.52.540), adopted by the Legislature in 2001 to continue the state’s 20 cent-per-month landline phone tax and to expand the uses for which the state funds may be expended.

The notice of rulemaking and proposed WAC amendments can be found in the April 16 Washington State Register, available at http://slc.leg.wa.gov/wsr/.

WSAC staff Sophia Byrd will attend the May 29 hearing.

“Judges Benefits” Case in Court Next Week

Nine counties will be in court next week to argue that the state should pay one-half the employee benefits for Superior Court judges. Oral arguments are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m., Wednesday, May 22, in Thurston County Superior Court.

Because of the subject matter of the case, any current Superior Court judge would face an apparent conflict of interest. Retired Judge Robert J. Doran will preside.

After unsuccessfully seeking legislative redress and withholding payments that they believe to be illegally assessed, the nine counties last fall filed suit against the state over who should pay judges’ benefits. A 1995 state budget proviso shifted half this cost to counties following a long tradition of full coverage by the state.

Since 1995, counties have repeatedly attempted to convince the Legislature that the cost shift was unconstitutional and procedurally flawed. In protest, a number of counties also refused to pay the invoices sent by the state Office of the Administrator for the Courts (OAC), which ended up absorbing the benefit costs in its own agency budget. Over the years, the holdout counties dwindled to nine.

The standoff heated up again in 2001, when the Legislature voted to withhold Initiative 695 backfill money from counties that were not paying 50 percent of the benefits for their Superior Court judges.

Joining Thurston County in the lawsuit are Benton, Franklin, Pend Oreille, Stevens, Ferry, Mason, Klickitat, and Okanogan counties. These counties are now paying the assessed 50 percent of judges’ benefits, but under protest pending the outcome of the lawsuit.

Since Washington became a state,

Court's Law & Justice

Superior Court judges’ salaries have been paid half by the state and half by the counties they work for, as provided in the state Constitution. The 19th-century state Constitution, however, does not make any mention of benefits, which are creatures of 20th-century statutes. As employer-provided insurance and retirement benefits evolved, the state paid for 100 percent of the standard benefit package for judges. The state continued to cover these benefits until 1995.

When the 1995 state budget shifted the benefit costs, this change was not supported by substantive amendments to state law. The counties’ lawsuit argues that a substantive amendment was necessary to overcome the precedent the state had set by paying for benefits in the past.

Puget Sound’s Health Shows Signs of Improvement, but Concerns Remain

Washington State’s Puget Sound Water Quality Action Team (Action Team) issued its third biennial report on the health of the Sound, “Puget Sound’s Health 2002”. The report analyzed data for 19 indicators to help determine whether the Sound’s health is getting better or worse. Eight of the 19 indicators showed Puget Sound’s health is getting better; two measurements showed the Sound’s health is getting worse; three were mixed; four documented continued concerns about persistent toxic contamination problems; and two were new indicators about near-shore habitats.

The Action Team concluded that overall, the quality of water, the health of some marine animals and other factors signaled improvement in the health of Puget Sound. However, other indicators or measures of the Sound’s health warned of concerns for the overall ecosystem. You may view “Puget Sound’s Health 2002” on the Internet at: www.wa.gov/puget_sound, or call (800) 54-SOUND.

The Action Team works with multiple organizations to develop and carry out activities to protect and restore Puget Sound. The Action Team includes representatives from some state agencies and some tribal, federal, and local governments. A council, made up of representatives from businesses, environmental organizations, local and tribal governments, and the Legislature advises the Action Team.

Auditors’ Annual Licensing Conference

The Washington State Association of County Auditors held their annual licensing conference on May 8–9 in Port Angeles.

The conference kicked off on Wednesday at noon with a warm welcome from Jefferson County Auditor Donna Eldridge, who introduced lunch-eon speaker Lana Cully, Vehicle Program Manager for the Oregon Driver and Motor Vehicle Services Division. Ms. Cully gave an overview of the licensing system in Oregon and discussed legislation passed this year.

After lunch the following individuals were recognized for their invaluable contributions in licensing to the Washington State Association of County Auditors:

Brenda Huntingford, Jefferson County
Carolyn Diepenbrock, Snohomish County
Cathy Pearsall-Stipek, Pierce County
Corky Mattingly, Yakima County

Greg Kimsey, Clark County
Jackie Burnett, Mason County
Kirsty Lowery, Skagit County
Norma Brummett, Skagit County
Pat McCarthy, Pierce County
Patty Shay, Pierce County
Roxanne Bese, King County
Vern Spatz, Grays Harbor County
Al Brodche, Mason County
Fran Burgher

In the afternoon, Vanessa Horning, Manager of the Business Contact Center for Verizon, held the audience’s attention with a program titled “Providing Excellent Customer Service in an Ever Changing Environment.”

On Thursday, the morning started off with a workshop featuring De Hicks from the Stuart Consulting Group. The program offered numerous solutions to dealing with difficult customers in a public environment, and outlined the keys to excellent customer service.

After a short break, Sargent Ken Pryzgocki of the Washington State Patrol, along with WSP Detective Matt McMillen, discussed the growing problem of auto theft in Washington State, and what suspicious items licensing staff should be looking for when processing registrations and title transfers.

Following the Washington State Patrol’s presentation, U.S. Customs Agent Matt Johnson gave an overview of customs operations in Port Angeles and the proper procedures for bringing a car from Canada into the United States to be licensed.

The conference concluded with a brief presentation by Sandra Foraker, President of WAVS on the “Visions of the VFS Office in the Near Future.”

County Auditors Meet in Port Angeles

The Washington State Association of County Auditors held its 96th Annual Conference in Port Angeles May 6–8, hosted by the very capable Clallam County Auditor Cathleen McKeown. Cathleen and her staff planned many special events, which were enhanced by an intense and excellent educational program, planned wholly by Auditors’ As-

The program included a presentation on workplace security by Grays Harbor County Sheriff’s Deputy Matt Organ; a report from the Department of Health’s Center for Statistics; an election methods study presented by Janet Anderson, chair of the League of Women Voters; a summary of the Community Trade and Economic Development’s fiscal note analysts jobs during the legislative process; and a day-long interactive workshop on conflict prevention presented by Wally Wilkins, Ph.D.

One of the highlights of the conference was a slide show and fascinating presentation made by Cowlitz County Auditor Kris Swanson on her December, 2001 political exchange mission to the Republic of the Philippines. The trip was sponsored by the American Council of Young Political Leaders (ACYPL), a nonprofit, nonpartisan educational exchange organization. During the two-week trip, the delegation observed the political process and government in the Philippine islands, participated in meetings with government officials, and traveled extensively. Swanson’s group included young American political leaders from throughout the country, including several legislators from other states.

During one afternoon, Island County Auditor Suzanne Sinclair, and Snohomish County Auditor Bob Terwilliger summarized this year’s legislative session, and Recording Committee Chair Lisa Goldsworthy, Snohomish County, presented implementation suggestions from the committee on two new pieces of legislation—veterans’ records protection, and the $10 recording fee increase to be used for affordable housing. The auditors voted to adopt the forms for veterans’ records that have been developed by the Recording Committee in collusion with Veterans’ Affairs, and after much discussion decided that to be consistent, no county auditor will collect the $10 recording fee increase on marriage licenses, since it is a “licensing” process and not a recording, and because marriage licenses have never been subject to the basic recording fee.

Secretary of State (SOS) staff updated the auditors on several issues early in the week: Elections Director Dean Logan outlined the federal election reform legislation; John Pearson reviewed the SOS legislative recommendations which passed the state Legislature this year; and Sheryl Moss discussed the election review process and new Washington Administrative Codes (rules), that SOS has developed.

Secretary of State Sam Reed attended the conference and presented SOS awards to Snohomish County Auditor Bob Terwilliger for “Auditor of the Year” and to Chelan County Auditor Evelyn Arnold for the “Voter Outreach Award.” Reed also discussed the legislation that “saved” the State Library from demise as planned by the governor’s budget cuts, since it will now be under the umbrella of the SOS.

Along with some local Makah Indian lore and entertainment by a Makah children’s dance group, host Cathleen MacKeown planned a Coast Guard helicopter rescue in the bay outside of the hotel during a break, planned a fabulous seafood buffet, and charmed the audience with David Morris, Superintendent of the Olympic National Park, who gave a lunchtime talk about the park and stories from his career in various parks in the world.

New officers elected to lead the Auditors’ Association for the ensuing year were Vern Spatz, Grays Harbor County, president; Ann Swenson, Pend Oreille County, vice president; Corky Mattingly, Yakima County, secretary; and Suzanne Sinclair, Island County, treasurer. Representatives heading the various districts will be Clark County Auditor Greg Kimsey, southwest district; Jefferson County Auditor Donna Eldridge, northwest district; Kittitas County Auditor David Bowen, central district; and Walla Walla County Auditor Karen Martin, eastern district.

The Auditors’ Association will hold its Annual Conference at Sun Mountain Lodge in Winthrop, June 10–12, 2003, and at the Lakeway Inn in Bellingham, June 14–16, 2004.
Financial Services News—
Free Retirement Planning

Choosing the right retirement plan investment options for meeting individual goals is difficult for county employees even in the best of times. In today’s volatile market, it is even more challenging.

To help employees meet the challenge, Nationwide Retirement Solutions (NRS) joined forces with Morningstar® to simplify retirement plan decision-making with an education and advice initiative for all of its public sector entities, including its NACo clients of all sizes. Investment guidance and enhanced education services will broaden the company’s current education capabilities at no cost to the counties that offer its retirement plans.

“Participants in the NACo 457 Deferred Compensation Program will have access to sophisticated planning tools and resources as a result of this relationship,” said Karen Eisenbach, senior vice president of marketing and education for NRS.

“This summer, for the first time in the industry, tools that gather personal information and provide personal retirement asset allocations will be made available to every participant at the same time, with no extra costs. As the market share leader, we are the only deferred compensation company in the public sector that could offer this kind of service on such a grand scale.”

The first online tool of the new initiative, Morningstar® ClearFutureSM, is an online investment education, research, asset allocation, and guidance service for all levels of investors. The asset allocation tool, which takes about 20 minutes to complete, gathers detailed financial information from participants to provide asset allocation suggestions for their deferred compensation plans. It offers personalized goal planning, takes into account outside assets, offers retirement income analysis, and includes an advanced “bear market simulator.”

ClearFutureSM also provides participants with reports on specific investment options, additional articles and interactive tools to build upon Nationwide Retirement Solutions’ leading educational capabilities.

“Our agreement with Nationwide Retirement Solutions combines the top retirement provider in the public sector deferred compensation market with the top investment education, independent retirement advice and research provider,” said John Rekenthaler, president of online advice for Morningstar Associates, LLC.

“Both Nationwide Retirement Solutions and Morningstar want to make it easy for county employees to plan for and reach their retirement goals, and we are both focused on providing innovative tools and outstanding customer service. The combination of our two companies translates into tremendous value for the NACo 457 Deferred Compensation Program.”

Combined with NRS’ current advanced education offerings, Morningstar® ClearFutureSM provides participants in the NACo program with the best overall guidance and education package available in the industry today. The companies intend to expand their offerings to other advice and education initiatives after the initial launch of ClearFutureSM.

Last Call for State Board of Health Representation

The State Board of Health membership term for a county commissioner, councilperson, or county executive serving as a member of a local board of health, expires June 30, 2002. WSAC is seeking names of those interested in serving on the State Board of Health to forward to the Governor for consideration of appointment beginning July 1, 2002. If you have thought about this and haven’t yet acted on it, now’s the time.

The mission of the State Board of Health (SBOH) is to develop policies to promote, protect, and maintain the health of Washingtonians. The SBOH must provide a public forum for development of public health policy in Washington State. The board has extensive authority to adopt rules it deems necessary to protect the public’s health. In general, local health officers and administrators must enforce the board’s rules. The SBOH has specific authority in certain areas, including 1) safe and reliable drinking water, 2) prevention, control, and abatement of health hazards and nuisances related to the disposal of wastes, 3) environmental conditions that threaten public health, 4) prevention and control of infectious and noninfectious disease, and 5) health data, including vital statistics.

The SBOH meets six to eight times per year, including traveling to locations outside the Olympia/Seattle area. The board also does some of its policy development work via e-mail, phone calls, and separate meetings. The time commitment varies depending upon individual board member’s degree of involvement in issues. The board covers travel expenses at the state rate.

RCW 43.29.030 details the SBOH composition and appointments. The board has nine members appointed by the governor. The tenth member is the Department of Health Secretary or designee. Membership includes: 1) an elected county official who is a member of a local health board, 2) an elected city official who is a member of a local health board, 3) four people experiences in matters of health and sanitation, 4) two people representing consumers of health care, and 5) a local health officer.

If you are interested in serving as the WSAC representative to the State Board of Health, please contact Vicki Kirkpatrick in the WSAC Office. For more information about the board, go to their website: http://www.doh.wa.gov/sboh.
CPO Offers “Open Meetings and Public Disclosure” Training

Over 450 county and city elected and appointed staff participated in the recently completed CPO workshops sponsored by WSAC/WACO/AWC/MRSC. The workshops were held in six locations around the state in an effort to bring this important training to our officials at locations that would reduce the need for travel. Those who attended gave the workshop very high marks and expressed their appreciation to the workshop planners for offering the training close to home.

Pat Mason and Paul Sullivan, both Legal Consultants with the Municipal Research Council, taught the course in each of the six locations. It was obvious from the attendance and the questions asked at each session that our officials sincerely want to comply with the complicated Open Meetings and Public Disclosure statutory requirements. Within the past two years, local media have continued to raise concerns related to local government compliance. With the materials in hand, we are confident the workshops will provide our jurisdictions with the information and tools needed to respond to requests for information.

At our Davenport and Mount Vernon locations, local print media staff attended the sessions. While at least one reporter’s headline read “Some minds closed to open government”, it was evident that our local officials asked questions in an effort to understand the laws and their complexities rather than find a way to avoid compliance. If you would like to read the story written in the 5/12 issue of the Skagit Valley Herald, the web site is: http://news.mywebpal.com/partners/575/public/news300734.html, click on Opinions-Columnists-Norm Lewis.

This training was the first in what we hope will be many efforts of the associations to bring timely training and information to our membership through the Certified Public Officials program.

If you would like more information about the Certification program, contact the WSAC or WACO office. The Core Course “Financial Management,” will be offered on June 18 in Bellevue. The course announcement can be found on the WACO or WSAC web site.

Oops! Wrong fax...

KING 5 Investigators: Collecting restitution

By Chris Ingalls, KING 5 News, 5/13/02

Some criminals are ordered to pay victims for their loss in dollars and cents. It's called restitution and sounds like a good idea, but a KING 5 investigation reveals most crime victims in our state are getting short-changed - by tens of millions of dollars each year.

Putting criminals in jail is expensive, so restitution seems like a fair alternative.

A criminal gets a lesser jail sentence in exchange for paying back his victims. It was seven years ago that Linda Patrick stood before the judge and was ordered to pay $30,000 restitution to her dozens of victims. For years, Patrick ran a Bothell business called "The Buffy Bus Company," which organized elaborate shopping excursions for elderly customers. But she often cancelled the trips without giving refunds, and she never paid many of her suppliers. Patrick owed caterer David Wasson, who cooked meals for the trips, $8,400.

"I did more than a quarter of a million dollars in sales out of this little kitchen in 15 years," he said. But a dusty kitchen is all that's left of his small business, which never recovered from the loss. "It destroyed my business," said Wasson. "I consider her the reason I went out of business. I haven't had any kind of restitution payment from her in more than two years."

It appears that Linda Patrick could pay for her crimes if she wanted to. While her victims struggled, Linda Patrick has a flourishing career. Patrick is a senior broker for Evergreen Pacific Services Mortgage Company, an Internet mortgage company, earning $125,000 per year. She owns one house in Tacoma and another one in Bothell. According to recent court documents, she declared assets of more than half a million dollars.

"When they convicted her of fraud, I thought the system was going to work. Unfortunately, the system really broke apart from that point on," said Wasson. KING 5 Investigators found that most criminals defy restitution ordered in courtrooms. After analyzing Washington state's figures, KING 5 learned that most criminals get a bargain - paying for their crimes with pennies on the dollar.

In the past five years, Washington courts have ordered more than $227 million in restitution, but less than $43 million - about 19 percent is actually paid. In other words, of every $5 ordered, the criminals only pay $1.

Victim's rights groups say its a common complaint and an appalling slap in the face for victims of crime. "It's another way that victims are not being shown dignity and respect that they deserve," said Jenny Wieland, Families and Friends of Crime Victims.

The Department of Corrections collects restitution - more than 8,000 cases in King County alone, with only a half dozen staff, mostly working the phones. Violators do get hauled into court to answer to a judge, but unlike Linda Patrick, most are unable to make their payments, according to King County Court's presiding judge.

"You run into persons who are in and out of jail and not employed or out of jail, employed and making marginal wages," said Judge Richard Eadie, King County Superior Court. In Central Washington, in the Chelan County courthouse, there is evidence that more criminals can pay their debt. Alice Hildum works full-time, chasing down restitution violators. In nine years, she's more than doubled collections of court fees and restitution in Chelan County and because the county gets to keep the interest that accrues on unpaid restitution, Hildum has been paying her own salary since the day she was hired.

"After the first month she brought in $65,000 in restitution that hadn't been collected, plus she had enough to pay for her own salary for the rest of the year," said Siri Woods, Chelan County clerk.

In Linda Patrick's case, it's another setback for prosecutors who've been trying to get her to pay up for years - her restitution now totaling $37,000. She has declared bankruptcy, and in a hearing last month, the judge decided while her finances are being sorted out her restitution payments are on hold. "You rely on the system at times like this as a citizen to take care of you," said Wasson. "It's unforgivable. It's unbelievable to me that that goes unpunished."

Both Linda Patrick and her attorney refused to talk to KING 5 Investigators for this story. Recently, there was a proposal in the state legislature to cut the Department of Corrections staff that collects restitution. The measure died, but it sends the signal that as tight as budgets are, making criminals pay up is not a top priority. Garnishment of wages can be an option and is done in some cases, but it's complex and the Department of Corrections admits it doesn't have the computer resources that would help streamline the process. So taking restitution directly from someone's paycheck is a tactic rarely used.
