Voters Say No To New Taxes and Approve Additional Tax Cuts

Voters soundly rejected Referendum 51, the 9-cent a gallon increase to fund transportation by nearly a 63% margin, and approved Tim Eyman’s Initiative 776, which cuts local surcharges in vehicle licensing fees to keep license tabs at $30.

Voters granted legislative authority of pension programs for police and firefighters to the unions in Initiative 790, while rejecting reforms to Unemployment Insurance contained in Referendum 53.

The battle for control of the state Senate and House of Representatives is still up in the air. Ninety-eight House seats and twenty-four of forty-nine Senate seats were on the ballot.

Three current county officials ran for the State Legislature. Kittitas County Commissioner Bill Hinkle ran unopposed for the Legislative District 13 State Representative Position 2, as did Pierce County Council member Jan Shabro in Legislative District 31. Whatcom County Sheriff Dale Brandland (R) ran for State Senator against incumbent Georgina Gardner (D) in Legislative District 42 and currently holds a 338-vote lead.

After Tuesday’s election there are quite a few new county officials. WSAC will be welcoming 15 new commissioners and it looks like there will be 44 new officials for WACO: 9 assessors, 5 auditors, 6 clerks, 1 coroner, 9 prosecuting attorneys, 10 sheriffs and 5 treasurers. Some of these races are still very close and there are still absentee votes that need to be counted so the results could change.

Unofficial election results for all of the counties are attached to this week’s Courthouse Journal. Results will continue to be updated over the next couple of weeks, so watch our website for changes at www.wacounties.org/waco/main.html. The last day for counties to certify the election results is November 20, and the last day for the Secretary of State to certify is December 5.

New Officials’ Orientation

WACO and WSAC will be holding a New Officials’ Orientation, December 10-12, at the WestCoast Olympia Hotel, in Olympia. All county officials are urged to attend and to bring new county officials with them. There are also many officials who have taken office since the last orientation in 1998 and it would be beneficial for them to attend as well. The conference will feature general sessions of interest to both groups and separate affiliate meetings.

New county sheriffs will be beginning their training on Sunday, December 8 so that they will have enough time for statutory training requirements from the Criminal Justice Training Commission. Treasurers will begin on Tuesday, December 10, and the orientation for everyone will begin on Wednesday morning, December 11, with joint training. Because most officials will be arriving on Tuesday, an icebreaker reception is being planned from 6:00 to 7:00 p.m.

For those officials who are pursuing the Certified Public Officials (CPO) designation, the New Officials’ Orientation is a requirement.

Now that the General Election is over, a complete schedule and registration materials will be mailed out this week. There is no cost for registration and meals for newly elected officials. Lodging and transportation will be the only expense.

A block of rooms is available at the WestCoast Olympia Hotel at (360) 943-4000. Please identify yourself as being with WACO and WSAC. Room rates are $58/single and $80/double.

The state's taxable retail sales were up slightly during the second quarter, compared to the same period last year, according to the state Department of Revenue. Washington businesses reported $21.11 billion in taxable retail sales during the period ended June 30. Taxable retail sales include sales from services, construction, manufacturing, transportation and other sectors, as well as traditional retail sales. The figure was $21.09 billion in last year's second quarter.

“Retail trade” excludes taxable receipts from everything but true retail sales, and more accurately reflects consumer spending. This measure saw an increase of 2.8 percent. It increased to $10.9 billion from $10.6 billion.

King County, which accounted for more than 40 percent of the state's taxable retail sales, saw a 3.2 percent decrease in the second quarter to $8.61 billion from $8.93 billion a year ago. The drop in retail trade was 2 percent, falling to $4.06 billion from $4.14 billion.

Justice Information Group Has Position for Commissioner/Councilmember
The state Criminal Justice Information Act (CJIA) Executive Committee has a position available for a county commissioner or councilmember.

The CJIA Executive Committee oversees the Justice Information Network (JIN) and is the entity responsible for developing statewide policies and planning associated with sharing criminal justice information among courts, police, corrections, and other criminal justice agencies. The committee is authorized by the state Criminal Justice Information Act, RCW 10.98.160, enacted in 1984 to facilitate implementation of the 1981 Sentencing Reform Act. More information is available at www.wa.gov/dis/jin.

The CJIA Executive Committee meets 10 a.m. to noon the third Tuesday of each month at the state Department of Information Services building in Olympia.

The WSAC Board of Directors will make the appointment to the CJIA Executive Committee. The term of service is open-ended. Please send letters of interest by November 15 to WSAC staff Sophia Byrd at sbyrd@wacounties.org.

Court Says County Not Responsible in First Responder Death
The state Supreme Court last week issued a unanimous opinion affirming a county’s statutory immunity against a lawsuit brought by an emergency search and rescue volunteer. (S&R) County commissioners/councilmembers and their emergency management professionals may want to discuss the implications of this case with their prosecutor and risk manager.

In Hauber v. Yakima County, the high court held that RCW 38.53.190, which immunizes state and local entities from negligence suits by search and rescue volunteers, governed the facts of the case even though Mr. Hauber was also a professional firefighter who under other circumstances might have been allowed to sue.

RCW 51.04.010 and RCW 41.26.281 provide extra protection for firefighters and police and permit them to both collect workers’ compensation and bring job-related negligence suits against their government employers. Chapter 38.52 RCW provides that local governments and emergency management organizations may enter into various types of agreements to assist at each other’s emergencies. But when operating under the terms of a mutual aid agreement, workers rendering aid outside their home jurisdictions are entitled to all the statutory protections they normally would enjoy. The plaintiff, Mr. Hauber’s estate, argued unsuccessfully that the combination of these statutory firefighter protections should serve to waive the county’s immunity granted by RCW 38.52.190.
Courts, Law and Justice

Writing for the court, Justice Tom Chambers noted that “Hauber was both an S&R volunteer and a firefighter. If Hauber had responded to the call as a firefighter or pursuant to a mutual aid agreement, he may have been entitled to bring suit against the city for negligence under RCW 41.26.281 by application of RCW 38.52.080. If he responded as an S&R volunteer, the county has immunity pursuant to RCW 38.52.190.”

The court then determined that Mr. Hauber had not responded to the rescue call as a firefighter because he was not performing his regular professional duties within his normal geographic work area. The court also held that Mr. Hauber had not responded within the terms of any existing, applicable mutual aid agreement.

The specific fact of this case worked in the county’s favor. But, given the court’s reasoning and the potential for liability under other circumstances, counties may want to review existing agreements, policies and practices.

Opportunity for Participation on the Intergovernmental Advisory Committee

WSAC has been asked to provided advice and recommendations to the Regional Intergovernmental Executive Committee (RIEC) concerning the implementation of the Northwest Forest Plan (NWFP) through a representative to the Intergovernmental Advisory Committee (IAC). Commissioner Al McKee, Skamania County, has served as WSAC’s primary IAC representative and has indicated a willingness to continue as the primary representative. The time has come to recharter the IAC, and as a part of this effort we are seeking individuals who would like to serve as an alternate to represent WSAC in the tri-annual IAC meetings in support of Commissioner McKee.

Rules for nominations for the IAC are set by the U.S. Department of Agriculture which requires the Secretary of Agriculture exercise “discretion” when selecting members for any advisory committee. This demonstration of discretion is fulfilled by having more than one name, a primary representative and an alternate, to choose from when making an appointment. Nominees to advisory committees must be able to take into account the needs of diverse groups served, and include individuals with demonstrated ability to represent minorities, women, and persons with disabilities.

Because the RIEC is operating under a time constraint, we would ask that interested individuals respond no later than November 15, 2002. Please contact Tom Robinson, 360-753-1886 or trobinson@wacounties.org to express your interest.

Just Out: DOE Report on Improving the Administration of Water Rights Records

Senate Bill 6387 directed the Department of Ecology (DOE) to “provide to the appropriate standing committees of the legislature, a plan, schedule, and budget for improving the administration of water right records held by DOE. The Bill’s language directed DOE to work with the Department of Revenue and with County Auditors in developing recommendations for improving the administration of water rights ownership information and integrating this information with real property ownership records. DOE was charged with evaluating the need for grants to counties to assist with recording and information management needs related to water rights ownership and title.

DOE recommends a phased-in process to allow them to begin mapping the State’s water rights. Phase I would require funding of $601,352 and suggests as additional funding becomes available, the full project or Phase II could begin. Phase II would lapse over six years and cost $5,971,932. This would add the imaging component to replace mapping of water rights from paper copies, with mapping of water rights from images of water right documents. Phase II would also add the Geographic Information System (GIS) component which enables the state water rights and county property ownership information to be connected. DOE also believes the benefit of a pilot allows Ecology and the counties to identify any unforeseen factors that would affect the effort. It also recognizes the capacity of smaller counties, currently strained, that do not have the resources to support GIS.

If fully funded, the proposed projects will provide increased usability and access to water right information by the public. Integrating water right ownership information with real property information will allow DOE to have direct access to property information when notification is required for proposed actions. The improved data systems will also provide increased research capabilities for those wishing to participate in a water market.

The report is available on the Department of Ecology website at http://www.ecy.wa.gov/biblio/0211011.html or contact WACO for more information.
Secretary of State Employee Returns from Bosnia

An elections manager from the Washington Secretary of State’s Office has returned from Bosnia after observing one of that country’s first democratic elections.

The October 5 Presidential Election was the first to be organized and conducted by authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina since the 1995 Dayton Peace Agreement.

“The people of Bosnia need to have faith in their government and election process to have faith in their future,” said Elections Manager Sheryl Moss. “I really feel Washington was lending my services and expertise to further democracy in a newly democratic country. It’s a great honor to have been selected.”

After Bosnia’s civil war ended in 1995, a form of government surfaced that ensured representation for Croats, Serbs, and Bosniaks. But even today, the country struggles to recover from its war-torn past. Thousands of strategically placed landmines still exist. The threat of unknown landmines is so prevalent stranded motorists are warned to stay on pavement for fear of crossing over dangerous territory.

“I’ve gained respect for the huge problems Bosnia is trying to overcome in uniting the Serbs, Croats and Bosniaks under one government,” said Moss.

Moss accompanied 30 observers from the United States to the region, along with some 400 representatives from 37 countries worldwide.

Two sections of the country held elections: Bosnia Herzegovina and the Republica Srpska. Bosnia Herzegovina elected a three-member rotating presidency as well as members of their two houses. Republic Srpska elected a President and two Vice Presidents (One Serb, One Bosniak and one Croat were elected). The candidate with the most votes was elected President. The other two were elected Vice President, Members of the National Assembly and Cantonal Assembly.

Assigned to the city of Brcko near the Croatia-Yugoslavia border on Election Day, Moss and a partner traveled to a dozen different polling places. Moss made the following observations:

When someone needs help, Bosnia allows multiple people in the voting booth. Even so, Moss observed “group voting” when no one needed assistance. At one polling station, people wandered in and out of the voting area. Other times, Moss witnessed husbands helping their wives who could not read the ballot.

Many absentee voters are turned away at the polls. If voters are out of the country, they may vote by mail. However, those inside the country but out of their voting area must register several months ahead and show up at a special polling station just for absentee voters. If their names do not appear on a list, they cannot vote. At polling stations visited by Moss, election workers turned away large numbers of absentee voters.

Like Washington State, Bosnia struggles with a low turnout among younger voters. It’s launched a campaign titled Education and Information of Youth to reach young people and encourage them to vote.

Public Lands Commissioner Doug Sutherland’s Discussion with the Timber Counties

Commissioner of Public Lands Doug Sutherland spoke to the Timber Counties meeting at the Wenatchee conference last month. Using a series of charts and graphs he presented a moderately optimistic picture for the future of DNR revenue. Acknowledging that income to the timber counties will most likely not be at the level of the late 90’s, DNR is making every effort to put up sales in every county.

Changes in the amount of timber available for harvest due to endangered species, the habitat conservation plan and the forest and fish rules, market conditions directly influence the amount of income from forestland. These changes also impact the management account causing Commissioner Sutherland to provide an early warning that the management fee may need to increase from the current 22% to 25% by the next biennium. “We won’t do this unless it’s absolutely necessary,” said the Commissioner, “right now it looks necessary.”

The Commissioner also reported on the agency’s Sustainable Harvest Calculations, now underway as required by law. The outcome of the sustainable forest yield calculations will direct the activities of the agency for the next 10 years. With the help of sophisticated computer programs, field surveys, and guidance from the Board of Natural Resources the sustainable harvest numbers should be ready by August 2003.

Commissioner Sutherland described a series of budget cuts DNR has absorbed over the past two years. Service delivery to recreation areas has been impacted by the elimination of positions, reductions in force, realignment of departments, and reduction in programs. In an effort to provide income to support the very popular recreation activities within the working forests, Commissioner Sutherland is proposing the development of a Legacy Trust. Revenue from this trust would directly support the operation and maintenance of the state conservation areas and preserves as well as the campgrounds and trails in the working forest. To establish the trust, land must be purchased by the state. The DNR would continue to pay property taxes on the land purchased for this purpose. Revenue from the land will go directly to the Legacy Trust. The Trust is a legislative proposal for this session. Commissioner Sutherland welcomed support for this effort.

Ridge Announces State and Local Advisors on Homeland Security

Homeland Security Advisor Tom Ridge announced October 16 the newly appointed members of the State and Local Officials Senior Advisory Committee to the President’s Homeland Security Advisory Council. A presidential Executive Order established the committee, which provides a means for state and local officials to advise the Homeland Security Advisory Council. Utah Governor Michael Leavitt will chair the state and local committee. Other members are: District of Columbia Mayor Anthony Williams; Orlando, Fla. Mayor Glenda Hood; Oklahoma State Senator James Dunlap; Emergency Management Director Robert Eckels of Harris County, Texas; Township Trustee Donna Finn of Jefferson Township, Ohio; Alabama Attorney General Bill Pryor; and Don Knabe, a member of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

The committee also will include representatives from various state and local government associations, including the National Association of Counties (NACo).

Jail Industries Board Relocating

The Jail Industries Board is relocating after being housed in the Washington Counties Building since 1996. We appreciate all the support WSAC and WACO have provided and look forward to maintaining our great working relationship in the future.

Effective Wednesday, October 30, 2002, the Board will be housed at the Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs new facility in Lacey.
