Newly Elected Officials’ Orientation Next Week!

We hope that all of newly elected county officials and many of the current officials have registered for the Newly Elected Officials’ Orientation scheduled for December 10-12, at the West-Coast Olympia Hotel, in Olympia. (County Sheriffs will be beginning on December 8 with the Criminal Justice Training Commission program.)

If you have not yet registered and wish to attend, please call (360) 753-7319 to sign up! Room reservations at the WestCoast can be made by calling 1-866-896-4000 or (360) 943-4000.

The orientation is designed to help new officials learn more about their positions, the county government environment and the resources that they will have available through both the Washington Association of County Officials (WACO) and the Washington State Association of Counties (WSAC). Veteran officials are invited to attend and meet their new colleagues and many of them will be helping with the training sessions.

The agenda for the conference is included in this edition of the Courthouse Journal.

First-ever Tribal/County Criminal Justice Summit Set for January

By now county commissioners and other county officials should have received an invitation to attend a statewide Tribal/County Criminal Justice Summit January 8-10 at the Skagit Resort in Bow, Washington. Final agendas are scheduled to be sent this week.

Grant funding covers the full cost of registration, two nights lodging and most meals for one member of each board of county commissioners. The summit registration deadline is December 23; however, room reservations at the Skagit Resort should be made by December 6. For more information, or to register, contact Sharon Morrow, office of the Attorney General, 360-493-9500 or sharonm@atg.wa.gov.

The event has been designed as a “working summit,” where participants work to strengthen relationships between tribes and counties. Key participants include county commissioners and councilmembers, tribal leaders, and both tribal and county law enforcement and attorneys.

For several months a steering committee of representatives from federal, state, local and tribal government has been planning the summit, titled “Building New Partnerships for Community Safety.” Clallam County Commissioner Mike Doherty represented WSAC on the steering committee.

Topics will include: sovereignty; liability insurance; federal tort claims act; emergency management and homeland security; and cross-jurisdictional issues. Speakers include: Governor Gary Locke; Attorney General Christine Gregoire; state Supreme Court Justice Susan Owens; University of

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) last week debuted a pilot version of “DisasterHelp.gov,” a one-stop portal for emergency preparedness and response information.

The DisasterHelp.gov web site is part of a larger initiative aimed at enhancing disaster management on an interagency and intergovernmental basis. While DisasterHelp will provide interested citizens with credible information and services across a wide range of relevant sources, the web site’s major objective is to provide first responders, emergency managers, and homeland security advisors an online capability to collaborate with other members of the emergency management community.

Rural Development Council Offers Community Assessments

The Washington Rural Development Council (WRDC) has partnered with several organizations, state and federal agencies, and private businesses to bring the Resource Team Assessment to Washington State. What is a Resource Team Assessment? A community-based planning and assessment process consisting of an independent team interviewing a large number of people in the community; recording their suggestions and comments; and having the independent team write up implementation plans, based on the interviews, for community use.

Over 90 individuals have been trained and are available to volunteer their time and talents to rural communities in Washington State. The objective of the Resource Team is to recruit partners to assist rural communities with locally conceived and driven development strategies. Through facilitated Listening Sessions, the Resource Teams hold up a mirror to rural communities so they can get a good look at themselves.

The Quincy Valley (including George, Crescent Bar, the Gorge, and surrounding unincorporated county) was the first community in Washington State to receive and drive development strategies. The Quincy Valley (including George, Crescent Bar, the Gorge, and surrounding unincorporated county) was the first community in Washington State to request a community assessment. Lisa Karstetter, Executive Director of the Chamber, coordinated the Quincy effort. At the request of the City Councils of George and Quincy, the Quincy Valley Chamber of Commerce, and the Quincy Port Commission, the 5-member resource team converged upon the Quincy Valley November 12, 13, and 14 and met with 16 groups ranging from high school students to senior citizens.

The team of five spent 3 days in Quincy. The week began with an in-depth tour of the area and ended with a town meeting where the resource team presented the major themes from the listening sessions. The report will be sent to Quincy within 6 weeks that will include recommendations, resources and opportunities for the community to implement, based on the major themes.

One month from the time the community receives the report the team or some portion of the team will return to Quincy to help with a prioritization process on the major themes.

The Rural Development Council will conduct a review and follow up after 6 months and then again at the end of the first year.

If you are interested in bringing a Resource Team to your community, contact Jim Lowery, Executive Director of the Washington Rural Development Council at (360) 943-5151 or email to washrdc@reachone.com <mailto:washrdc@reachone.com>.

Long-Sought Water Infrastructure Package Evaporates to Almost Nothing
Excerpted from a letter from Jim Waldo, Governor Locke’s Water Policy Advisor:
“Over the fall it became clear, given the recession and the current budget deficit our state is facing, that we were not going to be successful in securing a $1 billion program this coming session to support our water infrastructure needs. On the other hand, our water project needs are very real and cannot be ignored because times are tough. Governor Locke understands these needs. He has been and continues to be a strong supporter of addressing our future water needs now, rather than delaying action. That is why he reaffirmed his commitment to make whatever progress is possible in this area and to work closely with your legislators in finding solutions to allow local governments to proceed on implementing water projects. The governor outlined a new proposed approach containing four key elements to begin making progress now:

1. Prioritize available state financial resources to continue moving forward on critical water needs.
2. Pass legislation to let basins and regions fund plans. Provide greater flexibility for local governments to use existing local funding mechanisms for priority needs.
3. Pursue modest increased funding for existing water capital programs. Where necessary, add or clarify the authority to fund water infrastructure projects such as storage or re-use. This will help critical projects move forward.
4. Strive for federal funding to match state and local funding.”

In the letter, Waldo continues and adds that that he and state agencies will continue working on recommendations for the Governor’s consideration to make progress on water project priorities around the state.

Stormwater Developments
There are many developments on stormwater and a good way to keep up to date is through Ecology’s webpage: http://www.ecy.wa.gov/programs/wq/stormwater/. It provides updated information on the Snohomish County’s appeal of the industrial stormwater general permit and ongoing information on the rewrite of the construction stormwater general permit. There is also information on emerging stormwater treatment technologies, NPDES Phase II workshops that are sponsored by WSAC and the Association of Washington Cities through a grant from the Department of Ecology, and the request for a technical review of the Stormwater Management Manual for Western Washington.

Boards and Commissions
Nominees Sought to Fill Ethics Commission Vacancy
The citizen commission responsible for promoting and upholding ethical conduct in Pierce County government is seeking to fill a position that will be vacated at year’s end. The term for the position expires in February 2004.

Applicants for the volunteer position must reside in Pierce County and be registered voters. Other criteria are that commissioners may not hold or campaign for elective office, serve as a political party of committee officer, actively support or oppose candidates for County office, or lobby, employ or assist a lobbyist.

The position to be vacated is held by attorney Michelle Sherls. Her replacement need not be an attorney. Other commissioners are Chair Denise Hood, Gary Jacobson, Richard McGrue and Richard Nickell.

Appointments to Ethics Commission positions are made by County Executive John W. Ladenburg and subject to County Council confirmation. Persons interested in being appointed can obtain an application by contacting Giselle Kamieniecki in the Executive’s Office at 253-798-7477 or pcethics@co.pierce.wa.us.

The commission responds to and investigates citizen complaints concerning questionable behavior by county employees, as defined by the Pierce County Ethics Code. The commission also serves as a non-biased community resource on matters dealing with ethical conduct. The Ethics Code can be viewed at www.piercecountywa.org/council.

Correction on Clark County Charter Vote

In the last Courthouse Journal, we reported that voters in Clark County turned down a county home rule charter by a vote of 50.11% to 49.89%. We confused the issue by saying that Clark County voters approved a proposition to elect county commissioners by district. That would have been effective only if the charter had been approved. All propositions related to the charter were tied to the charter vote and because that failed, there will be no change in how commissioners are elected. We are sorry for any misunderstanding.

Washington Counties Benefit From Cooperative Purchasing

Hundreds of local governments in the State of Washington are saving tens of thousands of dollars every month by participating in the US Communities Government Purchasing Alliance. The Alliance is co-sponsored by the National Association of Counties and the Washington State Association of Counties along with other national and state associations of counties, cities and schools. Any local government in Washington may use the program under existing state statutes.

So how does the program work? Large public agencies from across the United States solicit contracts on behalf of all local and state governments. These public agencies follow the public purchasing procedures of the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing. Each solicitation includes language that allows other public agencies to piggyback on the contract without having to re-solicit.

Any county, city, school, special district, state agency or non-profit serving local government can access these contracts. The public agencies pay no fees to participate and do not have to commit to a specific amount of spending on the program.

Presently contracts are available for office supplies, industrial and electrical supplies, office furniture and computers and peripherals. In 2003 the program will also have janitorial supplies, copiers, school classroom furniture and auto parts.

Large and small counties alike benefit from the program. For example, Fairfax County, Virginia saves over $800,000 a year on office supplies by using the program. The smaller the jurisdiction, the greater the savings, due to the substantial buying power of the US Communities Alliance.

An advisory board of public purchasing officials oversees the US Communities program. The representative from Washington is Melody Mociulski, Director of Purchasing for the City of Seattle. Eighteen counties in Washington are presently using the program and King County recently joined the Alliance.

The program is very easy to use. Sign up on-line at www.uscommunities.org. Once you register for the program, you will be asked to check the contracts you would like to access. A representative from the supplier will contact your county within 48 hours to set up an account, provide the appropriate catalogues and pricing sheets, and answer any questions. Your county may then purchase as much or as little as it desires.

For more information on the program, contact Ginni Peppert at the WSAC office, telephone (360) 753-1886, email gpeppert@wacounties.org or Rob Braulik at rbraulik@uscommunities.org. Get on board today and start saving!

UW Executive MPA Program

The Daniel J. Evans School of Public Affairs at the UW is asking for your opinions to help them design a new degree offering: the Executive Masters in Public Administration. They have a short survey on the web. It takes just a few minutes to point and click through the questions.

The Executive Masters Degree program is designed for experienced professionals in leadership positions in public and nonprofit organizations. The format is designed for working professionals and features intensive seminars plus distance learning (instead of attending weekly classes on campus). Emphasis will be on high-level decision-making, practical application, and the integration of learning with experience.

Please take a few minutes to click on the following link to fill out the survey. (They hope to gather responses as quickly as possible.) http://www.outreach.washington.edu/survey/mpa/

Thank you for taking the time to do this. Please be assured that the Evans School will only use your e-mail or mailing address to correspond with you regarding the Executive MPA program and for no other purpose.

If you have any questions or concerns, please call Diana Wu, Program Manager of the Executive MPA at the UW at 206-221-7385 or e-mail exmpa@u.washington.edu.
John O. Trent, director of the Pierce County Public Works and Utilities Department is retiring December 31. Trent joined Pierce County in 1986 as assistant public works director. He was promoted to public works director four years later. When the Public Works and Utilities departments were merged in 1993, Trent was named to lead the combined organization.

Trent gave generously of his time to professional organizations and served as president and western regional vice president of the National Association of County Engineers and as a board member for the National Association of Counties, also on the Washington State Transportation Improvement Board and the County Road Administration Board. The University of Texas graduate is a member of American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Public Works Association, and the Washington State Association of County Engineers/Public Works Directors.

Trent and his wife, Donna, have four grown children and five grandchildren. We wish him a very happy retirement.

A party honoring Stevens County Assessor Blanche Estep for her many years in office will be held Thursday, December 19 from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. The reception will be held in the basement of the Colville City Library across from the Courthouse (corner of Oak and Astor). If you need further information, please call Sandy at (509) 685-0669 or email her at sjones@co.stevens.wa.us. Blanche is retiring on December 31 after serving as assessor for 37 years. Blanche has been an active member of both WACO and the Washington State Association of County Assessors for whom she is a past president. We wish her a happy and healthy retirement!

Congratulations to Snohomish County Elections Manager Scott Konopasek who is leaving Washington to assume his new position as the San Bernardino County, California, Registrar of Voters, the first of the New Year! Scott has been the Elections and Voter Registration Manager for six years and during the last year has been instrumental in the successful conversion from optical scan voting to touch screen voting at the polls in Snohomish County for both the primary and general elections this year. Last week we reported that Snohomish County Auditor Bob Terwilliger had appointed Carolyn Diepenbrock as the new Elections Manager, but failed to report on Scott’s new job. Best of luck to him! Carolyn has served as Licensing Manager in the Snohomish County Auditor’s office since 1990 and we congratulate her as well on her new position!

The staff in the Lincoln County Clerks’ Office extends an invitation to all county officials to a farewell reception honoring Lincoln County Clerk Joyce Denison. The reception will be held on Friday, December 27, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. in the Superior Courtroom in Davenport.

Public Information Officer Special Meeting: Smallpox Preparation

During the next couple of weeks, smallpox will be in the headlines again, hopefully not because of a case but because the federal government is asking states and locals to prepare and implement plans for pre-vaccinating people who will be responsible for inoculating the public if someone does contract the disease. Remembering the public response to anthrax fears, it's a good idea to prepare messages and fact sheets in advance of any questions about smallpox.

Public Information Officers and Communication Specialists in Pierce County are welcome to a meeting at the Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department on Tuesday, December 10, from 2:30 to 4:00 PM. We'll cover information about smallpox and vaccination. We'll agree on a plan and messages for responding to public questions about this disease. There is no charge to attend. Refreshments will be available.

Eyman’s I-776 on Hold

Associated Press, 12/04/02

SEATTLE - A King County judge on Wednesday granted an injunction to put part of Initiative 776 on hold in King and Pierce counties.

The initiative, sponsored by anti-tax advocate Tim Eyman and approved by voters in November, reduces vehicle license-tab fees to $30 a year and would end a $15 vehicle-registration surcharge used to help pay for transportation projects in the two counties.

The initiative was scheduled to take effect Thursday.

Other counties in the state are not affected by the injunction granted by Judge Mary Yu, since only King and Pierce filed suit to challenge the initiative. The two counties want the state to keep collecting the $15 fee for local traffic improvements.

The state attorney general's office is defending the initiative. It opposes the counties' motion and says the initiative is constitutional.

Pierce County and Tacoma filed a lawsuit Nov. 27, seeking to have the initiative declared unconstitutional. King County joined the suit Tuesday. Eyman was critical of the challenge.

"The government's love for tax dollars clearly outweighs its respect for the voters, and for the law," he said Tuesday. "Laws need to be respected and obeyed whether you agree with them or not."

In a statement faxed to news agencies Wednesday, Eyman accused King County Executive Ron Sims of selling bonds just before the election as a way of committing the tax dollars I-776 would have cut and thereby preventing the measure from having its intended effect.

"Sims’ actions are those of a dictator, not a representative," Eyman said.

Failure to Provide Beds For Mentally Ill Prompts Lawsuit

News Release ~ Pierce County ~ November 20, 2002

Barbara Jones (not her real name) voluntarily went to Puget Sound Behavioral Health, a licensed psychiatric facility in Tacoma operated by the Pierce County Regional Support Network, for mental health treatment. While there she attempted suicide by breaking a light bulb and using the glass shards to slit her wrists. She was involuntarily committed to Western State Hospital for 90 days by court order, but hospital officials didn’t admit her. Instead, they informed PCRSN that she would be placed on a waiting list until a bed became available.

In another case, nursing home resident Charles Johnson (not his real name) was sent to Allenmore Hospital after he assaulted another resident. A mental health professional designated by the county placed Johnson on a 72-hour emergency detention to WSH. Hospital officials refused to admit Johnson on grounds that no geriatric bed was available.

Although the patient names above are fictional, the cases are real and are cited in a lawsuit filed Wednesday, November 20 in Pierce County Superior Court. The lawsuit filed by Pierce County and PCRSN names the State of Washington, Department of Social and Health Services and Department Secretary Dennis Braddock as defendants.

The Regional Support Network contracts with the Washington State Department of Social and Health Services to assist in administering community mental health services. The county claims in the lawsuit that the defendants:

1. Failed to meet their constitutional obligation to "support and foster" institutions for the mentally ill;
2. Violated the state Involuntary Treatment Act and other state laws and regulations;
3. Violated the federal Medicaid law;
4. Impaired the contract with PCRSN by enacting legislation which reduces access to bed capacity at Western State Hospital for mentally ill patients;
5. Committed fraud by misrepresenting the number of WSH beds and (Continued on page 10)

the total amount of state resources that would be available to PCRSN under the contract;

6. Breached the contract by failing to ensure access to the contracted bed allocation;

7. Breached their fiduciary duty under the contract by promising a specific bed allocation and other resources knowing that those resources wouldn't be fully available;

The lawsuit seeks, among other relief, full access to WSH beds for patients detained or committed under the Involuntary Treatment Act and for compensation for costs incurred in providing mental health treatment at alternative facilities. The county also requests an order requiring DSHS to pay damages to PCRSN or to accept responsibility for identifying an institution outside Pierce County for alternative placement if needed.
